(B) EFFECT OF REDUCTION.—A reduction under subparagraph (A) shall be permanent and made in a manner prescribed by the Secretary.

(2) REQUIRED ACTION BY SECRETARY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall proportionately reduce base acres on a farm for land that has been subdivided and developed for multiple residential units or other nonfarming uses if the size of the tracts and the density of the subdivision is such that the land is unlikely to return to the previous agricultural use, unless the producers on the farm demonstrate that the land—

- (i) remains devoted to commercial agricultural production; or
- (ii) is likely to be returned to the previous agricultural use.

(B) REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall establish procedures to identify land described in subparagraph (A).

(3) TREATMENT OF UNPLANTED BASE.—In the case of a farm on which no covered commodities (including seed cotton) were planted or prevented from being planted during the period beginning on January 1, 2009, and ending on December 31, 2017, the Secretary shall allocate all base acres on the farm to unassigned crop base for which no payment shall be made under section 1116 or 1117.

(b) EFFECT OF LACK OF PAYMENT YIELD.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT BY SECRETARY.—In the case of a covered commodity on a farm for which base acres have been established, if no payment yield is otherwise established for the covered commodity on the farm, the Secretary shall establish an appropriate payment yield for the covered commodity on the farm under paragraph (2).

(2) USE OF SIMILARLY SITUATED FARMS.—To establish an appropriate payment yield for a covered commodity on a farm as required by paragraph (1), the Secretary shall take into consideration the farm program payment yields applicable to that covered commodity for similarly situated farms. (c) SINGLE OPPORTUNITY TO UPDATE YIELDS IN COUNTIES AFFECTED BY DROUGHT.—

(1) ELECTION TO UPDATE.—In the case of a farm that is physically located in a county in which any area of the county was rated by the U.S. Drought Monitor as having a D4 (exceptional drought) intensity for 20 or more consecutive weeks during the period beginning January 1, 2008 and ending December 31, 2012, at the sole discretion of the owner of such farm, the owner of a farm shall have a 1-time opportunity to update, on a covered commodity-by covered-commodity basis, the payment yield that would otherwise be used in calculating any price loss coverage payment for each covered commodity on the farm for which the election is made.

(2) METHOD OF UPDATING YIELDS FOR COVERED COMMODITIES.—If the owner of a farm elects to update yields under paragraph (1), the payment yield for covered commodities on the farm, for the purpose of calculating price loss coverage payments only, shall be equal to 90 percent of the average of the yield per planted acre for the crop of covered commodities on the farm for the 2013 through 2017 crop years, as determined by the Secretary, excluding any crop year in which the acreage planted to the covered commodity was zero.

(3) USE OF COUNTY AVERAGE YIELD.—For the purposes of determining the average yield under paragraph (2), if the yield per planted acre for a crop of a covered commodity for a farm for any of the crop years specified in paragraph (2) was less than 75 percent of the average of county yields for those same years for that commodity, the Secretary shall assign a yield for that crop year equal to 75 percent of the average of the 2013 through 2017 county yield for the covered commodity.

(4) UPLAND COTTON CONVERSION.—In the case of seed cotton, for purposes of determining the average of the yield per planted acre under paragraph (2), the average yield for seed cotton per planted acre shall be equal to 2.4 times the average yield for upland cotton per planted acre.

(b) EFFECT OF MINIMAL PAYMENT ACRES.—

(1) PROHIBITION ON PAYMENTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, a producer on a farm may not receive price loss coverage payments or agriculture risk coverage payments if the sum of the base acres on the farm is 10 acres or less, as determined by the Secretary, unless the sum of the base acres on the farm, when combined with the base acres of other farms in which the producer has an interest, is more than 10 acres.

(2) EXCEPTIONS.—Paragraph (1) does not apply to a producer that is—

(A) a socially disadvantaged farmer or rancher (as defined in section 355(e) of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 2003(e))); or

(B) a limited resource farmer or rancher, as defined by the Secretary.

(c) EFFECT OF PLANTING FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.—

(2) PRICE LOSS COVERAGE AND AGRICULTURAL RISK COVERAGE.—In the case of price loss coverage payments and agricultural risk coverage payments, the reduction under paragraph (1) shall be the amount equal to the base acres planted to crops referred to in such paragraph in excess of 15 percent of base acres.

(3) REDUCTION EXCEPTIONS.—No reduction to payment acres shall be made under this subsection if—

(A) cover crops or crops referred to in paragraph (1) are grown solely for conservation purposes and not harvested for use or sale, as determined by the Secretary; or

(B) in any region in which there is a history of double-cropping covered commodities with crops referred to in paragraph (1) and such crops were so double-cropped on the base acres, as determined by the Secretary.

(4) EFFECT OF REDUCTION.—For each crop year for which fruits, vegetables (other than mung beans and pulse crops), or wild rice are planted to base acres on a farm for which a reduction in payment acres is made under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider such base acres to be planted, or prevented from planting, to a covered commodity for purposes of any adjustment or reduction of base acres for the farm under section 1112.

(d) UNASSIGNED CROP BASE.—The Secretary shall maintain information on base acres allocated as unassigned crop base pursuant to—

(2) agriculture risk coverage under section 1117.

(b) EFFECT OF FAILURE TO MAKE UNANIMOUS ELECTION.—If all the producers on a farm fail to make a unanimous election under subsection (a) for the 2019 crop year—

(1) the Secretary shall not make any payments with respect to the farm for the 2019 crop year under section 1116 or 1117; and

(2) the producers on the farm shall be deemed to have elected price loss coverage under section 1116 for all covered commodities on the farm for the 2020 through 2023 crop years.

(c) PROHIBITION ON RECONSTITUTION.—The Secretary shall ensure that producers on a farm do not reconstitute the farm to void or change an election made under this section.

SEC. 1116. PRICE LOSS COVERAGE.

(a) PRICE LOSS COVERAGE PAYMENTS.—If all of the producers on a farm make the election under subsection (a) of section 1115 to obtain price loss coverage or, subject to subsection (b)(1) of such section, are deemed to have made such election under subsection (b)(2) of such section, the Secretary shall make price loss coverage payments to producers on the farm on a covered-commodity-by-covered-commodity basis if the Secretary determines that, for any of the 2019 through 2023 crop years—

- (1) the effective price for the covered commodity for the crop year; is less than
- (2) the effective reference price for the covered commodity for the crop year.

(b) EFFECTIVE PRICE.—The effective price for a covered commodity for a crop year shall be the higher of—

- Improves ARC by prioritizing the use of Risk Management Agency (RMA) yield data, basing payment rates on the physical location of base acres, and establishing a separate irrigated and non-irrigated revenue guarantee in each county.

- Converts base acres on farms that were not planted or prevented from being planted to a covered commodity at any point in time from 2009 to 2017 to unassigned base, on which no payments will be made.

- Requires the Secretary to ease regulatory burdens on producers by providing additional options for sharing data across the Department, and offering additional options to fill out the necessary paperwork for participation in farm programs.

TITLE II—CONSERVATION

- Continues robust funding of the Conservation Title, allowing investments in the locally-led, voluntary, incentive-based conservation model.
- Builds on the reforms of the Agricultural Act of 2014 by streamlining, simplifying, and improving program administration, while increasing flexibility throughout the Conservation Title.
- Reforms the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP), a program that has been in place for over 30 years and is the costliest conservation program. These reforms increase the cap from the current 24 million acres to 29 million acres by 2023 with no additional costs by making rental rate, practice cost-share and incentive reforms within the program. This is designed to target the program to the most sensitive lands while avoiding direct competition with market rental rates.

- Simplifies the Conservation Stewardship Program (CSP) by consolidating it into the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) while maintaining program function. Existing CSP contracts and associated funding will continue until their scheduled expiration.
- Provides increased funding for the Voluntary Public Access and Habitat Incentive Program while leaving the proven, successful underlying authorities in place.
 - Provides mandatory annual funding for the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Program to be used across the three program authorities: watershed planning, construction, and rehabilitation.
 - Introduces and provides funding for a new Feral Swine Eradication and Control Pilot Program to explore partnership-based solutions to slow the population expansion of feral swine and address their threat to agriculture, native ecosystems, and human and animal health.
 - Provides additional flexibility for the Agricultural Conservation Easement Program (ACEP) making the program more efficient for farmers, stakeholders, and USDA, while restoring a consistent level of mandatory funding.
 - Broadens the covered programs, simplifies the application process and program administration while adding additional flexibility to the innovative and popular Regional Conservation Partnership Program (RCPP). Includes an increase in mandatory funding and removes the contributing program requirement that was administratively cumbersome for the agency and partners.
 - Removes an impediment to conservation adoption by eliminating SAM/DUNS requirements for conservation and commodity program participants.
 - Focuses on important natural resource concerns like water quality and water quantity, by building support from “downstream” water users while decreasing the threat of regulatory intervention.

TITLE III—TRADE

Trade Promotion

- Streamlines the Market Access Program (MAP), the Foreign Market Development (FMD) Program, the Technical Assistance for Specialty Crops (TASC) Program, and the Emerging Markets Program (EMP) into one International Market Development Program, restoring funding for FMD and TASC, and establishing overall funding at $255 million per year, moving forward.

- Maintains authority for “monetization” within Food for Peace, but the 15% minimum requirement is removed to allow for more flexibility in development program implementation.
- Improves the development “safebox” minimum by increasing it by $15 million to appropriately account for the development (rather than emergency) goals of the Farmer-to-Farmer program, and by authorizing the Administrator to count Community Development Funds (CDF) toward the minimum to better coordinate development efforts across foreign assistance programs.
- Reauthorizes funding for the prepositioning of U.S. in-kind commodities at current levels to allow for timelier food aid delivery to areas with immediate needs.
- Reauthorizes the Food Aid Consultative Group to ensure that key industry stakeholders maintain the ability to provide valuable input regarding the effectiveness of procedures and regulations governing food aid programs.
- Streamlines annual food aid reporting requirements to allow the USAID Administrator and the Secretary to submit a joint annual report to Congress on programs and activities; outlines required report content; sets an annual April 1 deadline; and clarifies procedures if the report is not submitted on time.
- Renames assistance for stockpiling and rapid transportation, delivery, and distribution of shelf-stable prepackaged foods as the International Food Relief Partnership to reflect common industry terminology, and funding for the program is reauthorized to continue the use of Ready-to-Use Therapeutic Foods (RUTF) that save millions of lives by providing fortified, nutrient-dense products to vulnerable populations around the world.

PURPOSE AND NEED

Not since the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002 was enacted to prevent a farm financial crisis from unfolding has the need for a Farm Bill been more evident. Today, as then, the U.S. agriculture economy is in a deep, prolonged recession.

Net farm income has fallen by 52 percent over the past five years, among the steepest declines since the Great Depression. In the midst of a severe five-year recession, net farm income, measured in nominal dollars, is the lowest in 12 years, and the lowest since 2002 when adjusted for inflation. Meanwhile, costs of production have been steadily climbing.

The result is that farm and ranch income is not able to keep up with costs, forcing farmers and ranchers to work 16 hours or more a day, with many taking on two or three other jobs in town alongside their spouses who also work off the farm, just to make ends meet. In fact, the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City has observed that without this off-farm income most farmers would be unable to pay their debts.

According to the Agricultural and Food Policy Center and the Food and Agricultural Policy Research Institute, about two-thirds of the representative farms used nationwide to measure the economic health of agriculture are expected to be in marginal or poor condition.

Two Wall Street Journal articles—“The Next American Farm Bust is Upon Us” (Feb. 8, 2017) and “To Stay on the Land, American Farmers Add Extra Jobs” (Feb. 25, 2018)—encapsulate well the economic condition of farm and ranch country in America today.

The impacts are serious, both on and off the farm. Aging farmers and ranchers are encouraging their children to take jobs in the city rather than take over the family farm or ranch. Meanwhile, off the farm, the number of jobs outside of the metro areas has remained three percent below the pre-recession peak even as metro jobs have grown five percent.

But, even in 2015, near the beginning of the current recession in agriculture, the Economic Research Service (ERS) had already concluded that 46 percent of midsized family farms and 36 percent of large family farms had margins low enough to be considered “high risk”.

This is because agriculture is an inherently risky business. Farmers and ranchers operate in a perfectly competitive sector, meaning farmers are price-takers with little to no market power. Within this environment, farmers and ranchers tend to realize long-run average net returns that are near zero. Highly volatile prices and weather-related production losses create a high-risk situation for farmers and ranchers operating on very thin and often negative margins even in relatively ordinary economic times.

In fact, in 2015, ERS found that, on average, for the top four crops, a farmer realized a profit less than 30 percent of the time when all costs were taken into account. To contrast the level of risk in agriculture versus other sectors of the economy, a report comparing the two found that returns on agricultural assets exceeded returns on non-agricultural assets only once over the thirty-two years that were analyzed. The risks in agriculture are truly exceptional.

This helps explain why even in 2007, during relatively good years in agriculture, the Agricultural and Food Policy Center concluded that most U.S. farms and ranches would have been unable to survive the erosion in farm income resulting from an amendment to the Farm Bill at the time that effectively proposed to eliminate the farm safety net provided by Title I of the Farm Bill. It also explains why U.S. farm policy has been around in one form or another since our country began.

The predatory trade practices employed by foreign countries involving high and rising subsidies, tariffs, and non-tariff trade barriers; the record losses suffered in 2017 due to hurricanes and wildfires; costly government regulations; and spiraling health care costs, especially for the self-employed, are reminders of factors that lay well beyond the control of our nation's farm and ranch families.

For instance, in a single year, China over-subsidized just three crops by more than $100 billion and, more recently, illegally retaliated against American farmers in response to U.S. efforts to gain China's compliance with its other trade commitments. The egregious policies of China and many other foreign nations stand in stark contrast with the open market of the United States which has among the lowest tariffs and domestic supports in the world.

Despite the lopsided playing field resulting from a global market distorted by the predatory trade practices of foreign countries, America's farmers and ranchers have worked hard to stay competitive, generating a U.S. trade surplus in agricultural trade amidst a very substantial overall annual trade deficit for the United States.

The competitiveness of America's farmers and ranchers has also produced the smallest grocery bills for U.S. consumers, with Americans spending about 6.4 percent of total expenditures on food consumed at home.

Meanwhile, consumers around the world benefit from America's farmers and ranchers who truly provide the safest, most abundant, most affordable food supply in the world while also creating 21 million American jobs at home.

Although U.S. farm policy undergirds this remarkable record of accomplishment, its price tag comes to roughly one-quarter of 1 percent of the total federal budget, with the overall farm bill, which encompasses far more than a farm safety net, on target to save taxpayers more than $112 billion over the next ten years.

The Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 recognizes the unique risks inherent in agriculture, the hardship that America's farmers and ranchers are currently experiencing, and the enormous contributions the nation's farm and ranch families make to our country.

The farm bill keeps faith with these hard working farm and ranch families by providing a strong safety net, particularly under Title I of the Farm Bill and under Federal Crop Insurance, while also keeping faith with taxpayers and future generations of Americans by honoring the significant budget savings already being achieved under the current Farm Bill.

The farm bill maintains the broad statutory authority invested in the Secretary of Agriculture to respond to any extraordinary needs in farm and ranch country, including authority to provide direct assistance to farmers and ranchers who suffer economic losses as a result of unwarranted trade actions by foreign nations, including the illegal retaliatory actions recently taken or threatened by China.

The farm bill also further strengthens America's commitment to cleaner air and water, healthy soils, and abundant and vibrant wetlands, wildlife, and wildlife habitat; affirms our nation's commitment to highly successful humanitarian assistance and food aid policy; and renews critical investment in trade promotion tools vital to the global competitiveness of America's farmers and ranchers.

The farm bill fully funds the nutrition title, maintaining key initiatives in helping low income families put food on their tables while offering something far greater: training opportunities that will lead them to a good paying job, independence, and a brighter future.

The farm bill also ensures ample credit for our nation's farmers and ranchers so they can produce a crop and make long-term investments in their operations, while providing loans and grants for critical rural infrastructure, including reaching underserved and unserved areas of rural America with high-quality broadband service.

The farm bill provides the Secretary with the tools he needs to step up the fight against opioid addiction, incentivizes healthy forests and cutting edge research, while providing groundbreaking investment in animal disease preparedness and response and key initiatives for specialty crop farmers.

And, apart from the nutrition title, the farm bill represents the bipartisan work of Committee leadership. This work was ongoing and productive until the Ranking Member declared, after receiving instructions to halt further negotiations, that Democratic opposition to the measure could not be overcome due primarily to objections to a 20 hour per week work or training requirement for work-capable adults participating in SNAP.

Yet, despite the disagreement over the nutrition title, on balance, the farm bill still reflects the bipartisan consensus reached after a thorough, open, and transparent three-year process that included 114 hearings, six listening sessions in the field, and countless meetings with organizations representing every American whose life is touched by the farm bill.

TITLE I—COMMODITIES

Title I of the farm bill is the front line defense of farmers and dairy producers struggling to survive in the face of five years of depressed prices and revenue, and ranchers and livestock producers coping with production losses resulting from natural disasters.

Generally, farmers, ranchers, dairymen, and other livestock producers urged the Committee to maintain the suite of risk management tools provided under Title I of current law, including Price Loss Coverage (PLC), Agriculture Risk Coverage (ARC), Marketing Loans, U.S. sugar policy, dairy risk management, and supplemental agricultural disaster assistance programs. The challenge facing the Committee was honoring these requests with a budget baseline that is $1.7 billion lower than the baseline used to write Title I of the 2014 Farm Bill.

Despite the budgetary challenge, the Farm Bill honors the request of producers by providing farmers with a new election opportunity between PLC and ARC, with some improvements made to each option. Farmers noted that under previous farm bills, reference prices could become outdated and lose relevance to producers under certain market conditions. Many farmers who experienced severe drought during the last opportunity to update yields used to administer PLC requested a second opportunity. Farmers also frequently observed the disparate benefits from county-to-county under ARC and sought several ways in which to smooth out these disparities. The farm bill addresses these key concerns as well as others.

The farm bill also fully maintains the broad statutory authority invested in the Secretary of Agriculture to respond to extraordinary needs, including authority to provide direct assistance to farmers and ranchers who suffer economic losses as a result of unwarranted trade actions by foreign nations, including the illegal retaliatory actions taken or threatened by China.

The farm bill also honors the request of farmers by generally maintaining Marketing Loans and U.S. sugar policy. U.S. sugar policy is operating at no cost to the taxpayer and has done so for all but one of the last 17 years, the year in which Mexico was found guilty of dumping sugar onto the U.S. market at prices below Mexico's cost of production in violation of U.S. trade law.

USDA estimates that U.S. sugar policy will continue to operate at no cost to taxpayers due in part to the suspension agreements to halt illegal dumping and injury to U.S. producers that were agreed to by the United States and Mexico. Meanwhile, recent studies find that both U.S. retail and wholesale sugar prices are lower than abroad. The Committee expects the Secretary to carry out U.S. sugar policy in a manner that maintains these benefits to taxpayers and consumers.

The Committee did not include proposals put forward by manufacturer users of sugar because the proposals would legitimize the dumping of heavily subsidized imports onto the U.S. market, depressing prices for U.S. sugar producers and jeopardizing their ability to repay loans. Manufacturers also propose to reduce the sugar loan rate to levels set 33 years ago despite significant increases in costs of production since 1985. Finally, manufacturers seek to eliminate the nonrecourse nature of the loan, no longer accepting forfeiture of a crop pledged as collateral in satisfaction of loan debt. This proposal has serious implications not only for sugar farmers but sets a dangerous precedent for farmers of all crops eligible for marketing loans. The Committee observes that such proposals have also called for the elimination of sugar supports worldwide and notes that Congressional approval of H. Con. Res. 40 (115th Congress) is the best means to achieve this goal, a goal shared by U.S. sugar farmers.

For purposes of the prevailing world market price for cotton described in section 1204(d), the Committee urges the Secretary to consider modifying the current formula to include the three lowest-priced growths quoted for Middling (M) 1 3/32 inch, CFR Far East, rather than the current formula that utilizes the five lowest-priced growths. Moreover, for purposes of the adjustments to the prevailing world market price for cotton, as described in section 1204 (e)(2)(A)(ii), the Committee urges the Secretary to work with representatives of the U.S. cotton industry to ensure that the "average costs to market the commodity, including average transportation costs" fully and consistently account for all associated costs, including average storage costs and transportation costs from an interior warehouse. The Committee commends the Secretary of Agriculture's July 2017 decision to release the results of the new cost-to-market survey two weeks in advance of the actual Adjusted World Price announcement in which the new survey is incorporated, as this decision reflects statutory purpose and Congressional intent. The Committee believes that it is critical for industry participants to have advance notice of the new cost to market data and providing this to the industry will help avoid undue disruptions to the U.S. cotton market. The Committee urges the Secretary to continue to make these announcements in advance.

Recognizing the importance of timely shipment and delivery of cotton to the end-user, the Committee urges the Secretary to work with representatives of the U.S. cotton industry to achieve consensus among all segments of the industry on how best to update and modernize the current Cotton Storage Agreement for U.S. cotton warehouses. The Committee expects the Secretary to ensure that any updates are based on the consensus recommendations of the industry and include the following: (1) require the use of Batch 23 for shipping orders to include a valid load date; (2) update warehouse hours of service to be consistent with the hours of service requirements in the U.S. Warehouse Act; and (3) require a bale locator ID to be used when issuing a warehouse receipt and recommend that the locator ID be updated each time a bale location changes. The Committee expects the Secretary to ensure that the shipping order data from Batch 23 is utilized to audit warehouse performance in order to ensure warehouses are meeting the minimum shipping standard of 4.5 percent.

Dairy policy is maintained with some important improvements, including provisions to provide greater coverage levels at lower premium cost with respect to the first five million pounds of production. The former cap on livestock (including dairy) insurance policies available under Federal Crop Insurance remains lifted to allow insurance products to help all dairy producers manage risk. Finally, the calculation of class I milk is adjusted to better enable producers to hedge price risk in the futures market.

Livestock disaster programs are maintained and strengthened, including expanding the Livestock Indemnity Program to cover the death or sale loss resulting from diseases caused or transmitted by a vector that cannot be controlled by vaccination or other acceptable management practices, as well as through the streamlining of rules that have impeded the effectiveness of these programs in responding to disasters. The Committee is concerned about the administration of the Farm Service Agency's Tree Assistance Program for nursery tree growers. The Committee encourages the Secretary, acting through FSA, to further define "stand" as it relates to eligible crops for an eligible nursery tree grower. The Committee also expects that FSA gather input from a qualified ornamental horticultural expert to determine loss prior to the county committee making a determination on an eligible nursery grower's application. Further, the Committee expects FSA to allow additional time to fully access tree, bush, and vine damage to support an eligible nursery grower's application in the event that the 90-day disaster event deadline expires and disaster-related losses become apparent after the deadline. FSA is also expected to provide additional training of state and contract personnel regarding FSA emergency assistance programs available to eligible nurseries, greenhouses, and Christmas tree growers. With respect to the Livestock Forage Program (LFP), the Committee observes that FSA has lost a national appeals division (NAD) case concerning the regulatory treatment of contract growers who are at risk relative to the weight gain of livestock. The Committee encourages FSA to revise the regulation in order to provide clear and equitable guidelines for producers as to who is eligible for an LFP payment based on the type of contract under which they operate.

The Administration subtitle largely reflects previous such subtitles to ensure a speedy and seamless transition from old law to new. The Adjusted Gross Income test, which was imposed by the 2002 Farm Bill and sharply lowered under the 2008 and 2014 Farm Bills, is maintained at its current level. The lower aggregate payment limitation approved under the 2014 Farm Bill is also maintained. Pass-through entities are treated the same as general partnerships and joint ventures to ensure that farm and ranch families are not discriminated against based on how they structure their operations. Importantly, this does not excuse any persons or entities that comprise pass-through entities from the pay limit.

The Committee supports the Acreage Crop Reporting and Streamlining Initiative (ACRSI) insofar as the initiative makes reporting more efficient. In this regard, the Committee expects the Secretary to ensure that ACRSI complements, rather than attempts to supplant, the critical role of Approved Insurance Providers (AIP) or agents or any portion of the current private-public partnership. The Committee expects the Secretary to ensure that the continued success and integrity of Federal Crop Insurance remains paramount as ACRSI efforts move forward.

The Committee expects the Secretary to address inconsistencies across FSA offices in accepting Approved Insurance Provider-generated maps and urges the Secretary to ensure that the integration of resource land units (RLUs) into the common land unit (CLU) database is a priority in streamlining efforts. The Committee also expects that the Secretary will require that third-party reporting standards are the same as the standards applied to other data sources. Finally, the Committee also urges the Secretary to develop metrics to illustrate the status of this initiative, such as data on the benefit to producers.

TITLE II—CONSERVATION

The conservation title authorizes technical and financial cost-share assistance for farmers, ranchers, foresters, and landowners to improve conservation through voluntary, incentive-based practices on private lands. Through these programs, producers work to restore water quality and quantity, air quality, wildlife habitat, soil erosion and health, and regulatory compliance. The programs aim to improve our natural resources, while continuing to provide a safe, affordable food supply. Over the past several farm bills, the conservation title has gained significance while incentivizing substantial private investment in conservation practices.

The Food Security Act of 1985 authorized several conservation measures intended to address concerns about the impact of agricultural production on soil erosion and wetland loss. The 1996 Farm Bill took the groundbreaking step of consolidating previously discretionary funded programs into one new program, the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP), funded with mandatory money from the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC). EQIP is now one of the most successful and popular programs among farmers and ranchers.

Budget circumstances for the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002 allowed for the expansion of conservation programs with the addition of $17.5 billion to the conservation baseline for the life of the bill and the out-year baseline as well. The Conservation Security Program was also created.

Despite budget pressures, the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 increased conservation spending by nearly $4.5 billion during the life of the bill and created new, targeted conservation programs such as the Chesapeake Bay Program and the Cooperative Conservation Partnership Initiative (CCPI). The bill also made significant reforms to and renamed the Conservation Stewardship Program (CSP). However, the Wetland Reserve Program (WRP), the Grassland Reserve Program (GRP), the Small Watershed Rehabilitation Program, and the Voluntary Public Access and Habitat Incentive Program remained without adequate baselines given the demand and interest in these programs.

Recognizing the growing complexity of the conservation title, the Agricultural Act of 2014 eliminated or combined 23 duplicative and overlapping programs into 13 programs to allow for streamlined delivery, while also providing an estimated $6.1 billion in savings below baseline funding. Additionally, the bill created the Regional Conservation Partnership Program (RCP) to address landscape-scale concerns while leveraging significant private investment.

The Committee recognizes that the programs have been successful, yet further consolidation can create a better customer service experience for producers with NRCS and return a greater conservation impact for the investment. By phasing out CSP and incorporating the program into EQIP, which will in turn see funding growth over the life of the farm bill, producers will be able to address their conservation needs with greater precision. Furthermore, by eliminating burdensome requirements, the Committee encourages greater participation and adoption of practices. The Committee's priority to assist farmers and ranchers in addressing environmental regulations and conservation needs has not changed.

Conservation Reserve Program (CRP)

The Committee strongly supports CRP as one of the main pillars of cost-effective conservation available to farmers and ranchers. However, through the hearing process, it became clear that the lower statutory cap of 24 million acres was not sufficient to enroll many sensitive acres. Furthermore, the Committee believes that in years of high commodity prices, many acres capable of production were not available because they were enrolled in CRP, directly competing with many producers actively seeking land to farm. The Committee-reported bill addresses both issues by incrementally raising the statutory acreage cap to 29 million acres while eliminating incentive payments and capping rental rates for initial and successive re-enrollments. These market-based adjustments ensure sensitive acres have room in the program without competing directly with producers. The reported bill ensures the availability of the program across the country by allocating acres for enrollment during the sign-up period to each state in proportion to the historic enrollment during the period 2007 through 2016.

The reported bill directs the Secretary to reserve up to three million acres of CRP for working grassland contracts and retains the priority for transitioning expiring contracts to grasslands as an alternative to returning the fields to cultivation. The bill provides a step up of grassland acres offered for enrollment in each of the five years and reserves the unused acres, if any, for grassland enrollment only.

The Committee recognizes the need for grazing flexibility as a method of management, with great environmental and economic benefits. The reported bill maintains the authority for the Secretary to allow use of CRP during natural disasters without penalty. It further provides greater flexibility for haying and grazing of the cover throughout the life of the contract under a Secretary-approved plan. Additionally, grazing as a mid-contract management activity can be accomplished without a reduction in the rental payment.

The Committee adjusted the cost-share rate for conservation practices on the enrolled lands. Further, the Committee limited the cost-share for seed costs. The Committee intends for the choices of conservation cover and associated seed mixtures to be constructed with the producer's input, meet the applicable conservation practice standard, achieve the program's purposes, and responsibly invest the Federal contribution.

To ensure beginning farmers have access to land, the reported bill preserves the Transition Incentives Program (TIP) and allocates $33 million to facilitate this effort. The bill also continues the flexibility to work with producers on expiring contracts to maintain buffers and other high value practices in the program while providing assistance in transitioning the field to agriculture production during the final year of the contract.

Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP)

The Environmental Quality Incentives Program provides cost-share incentives to producers to meet or avoid the need for national, State, or local regulation. Under the Committee-reported bill, funding is significantly increased to $3 billion per year by 2023 to allow more producers to utilize cost-share assistance to improve conservation on their operations.

The Committee-reported bill updates the program to include conservation activities that support precision conservation management technologies and further defines priority resource concerns and stewardship practices to encompass all innovative practices and ensure farmers, ranchers, and foresters have the flexibility to address their needs. The Committee-reported bill recognizes the importance of stewardship practices promoted through the Conservation Stewardship Program in the past. Stewardship practices, such as cover crops, have a positive impact on soil health and water quality.

The Committee also recognizes that resource conserving crops, such as sorghum and alfalfa, when used in a rotation can yield benefits to soil health, water conservation, and water quality. Resource conserving crops play a vital role in overall conservation of resources in a working operation and should be supported through the consolidated EQIP. The Committee recognizes that conservation practices have significant value for farmers and ranchers, but also have significant downstream benefits in addition to those realized on the farm, ranch, or forestland by the producer. Incorporating stewardship practices into EQIP will continue to support ongoing and further adoption of these important agriculture and forest practices. The Committee looks forward to working with NRCS to deliver the program in a way that encourages the adoption of cover crops and conservation benefiting precision agriculture technologies on cropland, and practices that promote increased stewardship of our grazing lands and forest resources.

In clarifying an expanded view of a resource conserving crop, the Committee offers the following definition: A "Resource conserving crop rotation" refers to a crop rotation that includes at least one resource-conserving crop; reduces erosion; improves soil fertility and tilth; interrupts pest cycles; and in applicable areas, reduces depletion of soil moisture or otherwise reduces the quantity of irrigation needed. A "resource conserving crop" may be: (1) a perennial grass, legume, or grass/legume grown for use as a forage, seed for planting, or green manure; (2) a high residue producing crop; (3) a cover crop following an annual crop; (4) a water savings crop (including sorghum); or (5) a crop in rotation that interrupts pest or disease cycles or otherwise conserves resources.

Bringing forward the best of the CSP into EQIP, stewardship contracts will be available to producers for not less than five years but no more than 10 years to receive annual and cost-share payments for adoption, installation, required management and maintenance of stewardship practices that attain increased natural resource stewardship on the applicable portion of the farm, ranch, or forest as determined by the producer. The Committee anticipates stewardship practices with broad resource benefits including, but not limited to, cover crops, transition to resource conserving crop rotations, and incorporation of precision agriculture technologies into agriculture operations will be available to producers within the program. Similarly, a broad suite of stewardship practices relating to grazing lands and forest lands will be available to incentivize increased levels of conservation around locally-established resource priorities.

Stewardship practice payments to a producer or legal entity will not exceed $50,000 per fiscal year and the Secretary cannot use more than 50% of the annual EQIP allocation for stewardship contracts. Within the combined program, the Committee intends for the stewardship contracts to be driven by a locally-led priority setting process that results in adoption of conservation practices addressing the highest priority conservation needs across all private land uses within a particular watershed, or other appropriate region or area within a State.

The reported bill expands the irrigation water conservation authorities by making irrigation districts, irrigation associations, and acequias eligible for contracts and certain other discretionary authorities granted to the Secretary ensuring successful adoption of water conserving measures within a broader project area. The Committee believes NRCS can use this additional flexibility to work cooperatively with these associations and directly with landowners to improve water conservation measures and create new efficiencies where aquifers are in decline and surface water supplies are limited. In achieving water conservation benefits, the Committee understands the complexity of determining water savings and reduction. Therefore, the Committee urges the Department to use these authorities to promote adoption of conservation practices that promote efficient and effective use of irrigation water, and not focus on net water savings per acre irrigated.

The Committee directs the Secretary to ensure conservation practice standards reflect the use of integrated irrigation and nutrient management technologies, such as microirrigation systems (e.g., drip irrigation). Such technology, in addition to providing increased water efficiency, can be used to distribute fertilizers and other nutrients directly to plant roots, improving soil health, both water quantity and quality, and reducing nutrient runoff. In the case of EQIP applications involving irrigation projects, the Committee encourages the Secretary to consider whether the projects include an integrative approach to addressing nutrient management and water efficiency issues.

As in previous farm bills, the Committee-reported bill retains 5 percent of the funding for practices that provide wildlife habitat. However, it removes the 60 percent allocation for livestock. The Committee recognizes the broad responsibilities of EQIP and the great work that it does in promoting environmental stewardship among livestock and poultry farmers around the country. The Committee believes this decision will remove an administrative tracking burden from NRCS. Combined with the significant increase in funding and retaining the locally-led setting of priorities, livestock producers will continue to have access to the EQIP. In addition, the annual funding dedicated to wildlife-benefiting practices will increase as annual funding grows through 2023.

The Committee addressed the concerns heard in hearings regarding beginning farmers by maintaining set-asides for beginning farmers and ranchers and socially disadvantaged producers, while prioritizing veteran farmers. The set-aside will remain unchanged and producers will continue to be eligible to have up to 50 percent of upfront project costs covered in advance.

The Committee also heard concerns from community colleges and universities who operate farms for teaching and research purposes. The reported bill acknowledges them as working farms eligible for Conservation Innovation Grants. It further establishes clear authority for conservation innovation field trials through expanded partnerships, incentive payments, and technical assistance.

Conservation innovation and agriculture technology development is occurring at an exceptional pace across rural America. Recognizing the recent growth and opportunity for new and emerging technologies during the life of this farm bill, the Committee created a new option within EQIP for on-farm conservation innovation trials. Up to $25 million in annual EQIP funding will be used for payments to producers in adopting, evaluating, and demonstrating new and innovative conservation approaches. This new effort will provide flexibilities for scaling, length of contracts, technical assistance, and reporting of effectiveness and “lessons learned” to be shared with others.

The Committee is aware of concerns within the dairy and livestock sectors that NRCS does not currently maintain practice standards that easily incorporate nutrient recovery technologies. These technologies can help to remove excess phosphorus and nitrogen from manure, mitigating the environmental impacts of farming while also providing water quality benefits beyond the farm gate. The Committee encourages the Secretary to develop a new practice standard that would allow for nutrient recovery systems to be directly eligible under conservation programs.

The Committee recognizes the broad and significant role of the EQIP program in promoting environmental stewardship. In addressing water quality as a resource concern, the Committee believes that conservation programs should prioritize funding for producers implementing fertilizer management practices that incorporate the use of the right fertilizer source, the right rate (amount of fertilizer), the right placement of fertilizer (including precision application) and the right timing of fertilizer applications (making the nutrients available when the crop needs them). These practices are recognized by the USDA–NRCS 590 Nutrient Management Standard and have been proven to help producers optimize production potential and protect the environment.

Additionally, the Committee encourages NRCS to include—in its outreach and education program—a plan to ensure farmers understand that conservation funding (EQIP) is available to assist them with incorporating these fertilizer BMPs into their nutrient management plans.

The Committee requests USDA evaluate the use and benefits of innovative technologies such as plant biostimulants and their role in achieving enhanced conservation benefits. These tools and other emerging and innovative technologies recognized by USDA to be beneficial to conservation and agriculture production should be incorporated into conservation standards and specifications for nutrient management and related conservation practices.

Other conservation programs

During the hearing process, stakeholders voiced broad support for the Watershed and Flood Prevention programs of USDA. By authorizing mandatory funding, the program can continue to maintain the integrity of our dams that have been created under watershed authorities. This essential infrastructure works to protect life and property while maintaining the integrity of the landscape. The Committee intends for the Secretary to develop a process for identifying priorities and allocating the mandatory funding to address needs in planning, watershed operations and rehabilitation.

The reported bill extends the authority to appropriate funds for the Conservation of Private Grazing Lands, and provides mandatory funding for the Grassroots Source Water Protection Program and the Voluntary Public Access Program. These program authorities are extended through 2023 without modification of the underlying authority.

The reported bill authorizes the creation of a pilot project to eradicate destructive and invasive feral swine. NRCS and APHIS will coordinate with State Technical Committees to identify and prioritize pilot projects and provide producers with financial and technical assistance to control the populations, including traps. The pilot will be funded at $100 million. The Committee looks forward to working with the Secretary to initiate pilot project activities within each state having issues with expanding feral swine populations to demonstrate techniques at a geographic scale where producers, State and local governments, and Federal land stewards can work cooperatively to substantially impact the swine population.

During the Committee markup, the bill was amended to include provisions that provide flexibilities to the Emergency Conservation Program for payments to producers repairing or replacing fences due to wildfires and flood events. The Committee is aware of varied policies and procedures across the states in establishing documentation requirements and payment rates. This situation creates uncertainty with producers regarding the final financial assistance payments they will receive during a time they are working to overcome adversity and reestablish their operations impacted by natural disasters. The reported bill also codifies cost-share requirements from current Federal regulations and expands the enhanced cost-share for limited resource producers to include beginning and socially disadvantaged producers.

The reported bill continues the consolidation of conservation programs started under the 2014 Farm Bill by repealing Terminal Lakes Assistance established in Section 2507 of the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002, and the Conservation Security Program in Chapter 2, Subchapter A of Title XII of the Food Security Act of 1985.

Funding and administration

The Funding and Administration subtitle allocates funds to programs in the conservation title and further streamlines delivery. It improves customer service and participation by removing barriers to participation. The Committee recognizes the need to continue to support beginning farmers and ranchers. As such, the reported bill requires that 5 percent of funds in EQIP be directed to beginning farmers, and an additional 5 percent directed to socially disadvantaged farmers. The regional equity language is removed with the expectation the Secretary will use the funding provided within the bill to address locally-driven conservation needs in each State. This section is further amended to update annual reporting requirements to Congress to conform to the changes made by the reported bill.

Delivery of technical assistance

The Committee recognizes the expanding third-party service sector assisting in conservation technical assistance needs that are unmet by the limited USDA staff available, and the current technical service provider registration maintained by USDA. While the Committee maintains and supports the provision of conservation technical assistance through USDA, we believe there are opportunities for the private-sector to engage and augment this assistance, especially within some of the highly specialized operation-specific components of some agriculture operations. The bill clarifies the role of third-party providers and expands options for the Secretary to create alternate certification methods in improving access of agriculture producers for technical support.

The Committee is aware of the increased pressure being placed on agricultural landscapes to deliver clean and abundant drinking water for our communities. The locally driven, voluntary, incentive-based conservation programs encompassed in the farm bill will play no small role in meeting this need. While these programs accrue wide ranging and far reaching benefits across America, we believe targeting a portion of these resources to source water protection measures is prudent for agriculture and our communities. The Committee looks forward to working with the Secretary to identify targeted water-supplying watersheds and effective conservation measures that could produce tangible benefits to water quality and watershed health under this new provision.

The Committee encourages NRCS to continue to work with the United States Forest Service and State forestry agencies to streamline and align forest management plan requirements in non-industrial private forestry assistance programs administered by each of these agencies. The Committee recognizes the unique interests each agency brings to forest management planning and encourages the natural resource conservation component of NRCS technical assistance be complimentary to the interagency forest planning effort.

The Committee retains Section 1244(h) of the Food Security Act of 1985, "Encouragement of Pollinator Habitat Development and Protection" without changes. The Committee continues to recognize the economic interest of agriculture producers and American consumers in ensuring a healthy, sustainable population of native and managed pollinators, including managed honey bees. The Committee remains concerned about the decline in the health and viability of managed honey bees due in part to a loss of appropriate habitat. To enhance ongoing efforts of increasing pollinator habitat on conservation lands, the Committee draws the Department's attention to this existing provision and emphasizes our expectation that all the programs under the Conservation Title provide support and encourage producers to develop, maintain, and protect pollinator habitat.

Establishment of State technical committees

This bill amends section 1261 of the Food Security Act of 1985 to include a representative from a State's land-grant college or university as a member of the State Technical Committee. Although there are commonalities among the States, many issues pertaining to soil and water conservation research are peculiar and unique to a State. The peculiarities and uniqueness are further highlighted and exacerbated on a regional level. State land-grant colleges and universities conduct soil and water conservation research that is important to consider in implementing conservation programs. In fact, much concern has been expressed regarding inappropriate soil classifications and seed mixtures used in implementing conservation programs in a State which were inappropriate for the region. Including a representative from each State's land-grant college or university will ensure that the most up to date information is utilized in implementing conservation programs.

Agricultural Conservation Easement Program (ACEP)

The Committee-reported bill maintains the consolidation of all easement programs in the Agriculture Conservation Easement Program (ACEP) which performs the functions of conserving agricultural lands through the Agriculture Land Easements (ALE) and wetlands through the Wetland Reserve Easements (WRE). The Committee continues to support the efforts of NRCS to preserve lands for production and conservation into perpetuity, preserving the significant environmental benefits lost when land is converted for development. As such, the Committee-reported bill restores mandatory funding levels and makes significant steps to streamline the application process.

Specifically, the Committee-reported bill clarifies that ALE-enrolled easements may be used for nonagricultural purposes so long as they do not compromise the environmental benefits. It clarifies the Secretary's right of enforcement in the case of fraud or negligence, but does not authorize the Secretary the right of inspection unless the ALE partner fails to enforce the easement. The Committee-reported bill eliminates the burden of a conservation plan for ALE easements, but allows the Secretary to implement a plan on highly erodible land. The bill amends the language associated with the funding sources an eligible entity may use to meet the non-Federal share of the agricultural land easement purchase.

The Committee recognizes the partnership between NRCS and accredited land trusts in implementing ACEP. Section 2503 of the Committee-reported bill creates an equivalency to expedite certification of respected land trusts that have been accredited by the Land Trust Accreditation Commission, and has completed at least five acquisitions of easements under the program to be considered certified for the purposes of the program. Furthermore, the reported bill directs the Secretary to account for geographical differences to maximize on-the-ground benefits.

The reported bill waives the adjusted gross income limitation for landowners participating in easement programs.

Regional Conservation Partnership Program (RCPP)

The Committee continues to believe that a targeted approach to conservation is the most effective way to address various resource concerns on a local landscape-scale. Targeted conservation initiatives can help producers alleviate the burden of regulations, but also preempt the need by tailoring a locally-led, voluntary solution. Through the hearing process, stakeholders voiced broad support for RCPP and how it is currently working to address resource concerns on a locally-led landscape scale.

The reported bill takes forward-reaching steps in adding both CRP and the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Program to the list of covered programs. Water quality work in watersheds serving as source water for drinking is added as an eligible activity. The Committee addresses opportunities for renewing successful projects and extending projects beyond five years when the objectives of the program will be better served. Furthermore, the reported bill creates an expectation that the Secretary will streamline the application process and provide greater clarity to eligible partners and producers on quantifying and reporting outcomes from the implemented project. Finally, the program will receive a fixed annual allocation of funds alleviating the complexity associated with using funds appropriated to other programs.

Repeals and transitional provisions; technical amendments

The Committee-reported bill updated the statute to repeal several programs such as the Conservation Security Program and the Terminal Lakes Assistance Program. Further, the Conservation Stewardship Program is prohibited from enrolling any new contracts or renewing contracts. However, it shall have no effect on existing contracts. The Committee remains committed to the conservation work that the NRCS had accomplished with producers through CSP and has incorporated the essential authorities into EQIP to carry out the mission.

The sense of the Committee regarding other conservation efforts

The Rural Conservation Corps have a long history of supporting voluntary conservation through partnering with Federal agencies to develop and implement critical public lands conservation service projects. Corps are authorized to accomplish this work with USDA and the Department of the Interior (DOI) through the Public Lands Corps Act of 1993. These agriculture partnerships have seen successful because of the capacity. There is a value to the partnerships between Service and Conservation Corps, Conservation Districts, and NRCS to meet locally-driven conservation goals, provide farmer and rancher outreach and technical assistance, complete conservation projects, and develop the next generation of local agriculture and conservation leaders.

The Committee recognizes the importance of maintaining and managing non-industrial private forest cover as a watershed management tool, assuring dependable and clean supplies of water to communities, farmers, ranchers, and downstream industries. The Committee is especially concerned with the risks that unmanaged forests pose to water supplies, especially in areas of high wildfire risk, as well as the impacts of forest conversion to developed uses on sedimentation and flow management. The Committee encourages the Secretary to utilize the program flexibilities and policies within the title to encourage public- and private-sector forested watershed partnerships. The authorities provided for the State Technical Committees should be used to coordinate Federal and private-sector funding and cost-share efforts that can provide private forest landowners resources to implement management actions that protect downstream water quality, address water supply, and flood protection.

The Committee also encourages NRCS to establish at least one pilot to experiment with streamlined private-sector co-investing with NRCS in watershed restoration. The Committee urges NRCS to explore mechanisms that allow the NRCS and private-sector funds to be combined in a watershed restoration fund that makes payments for forest management and restoration activities on private lands to maintain or improve forested watersheds. Such a fund shall ensure that private landowners are the recipient of the benefits and maintain existing NRCS program eligibility requirements for private landowners.

The Committee included specific language in the Agricultural Conservation Easement Program protecting the access of landowners to ecosystem service markets. The Committee intends for the Secretary to continue the Department's existing policy of not claiming any ownership rights over ecosystem services credits generated through participation in USDA conservation programs. The Department is also urged to help communicate to State and local governments about the opportunity to increase the utilization of dairy manure management and other agriculture conservation technologies by combining USDA funding with ecosystem services credits accounting for the full cost of installing and maintaining a project.

TITLE III—TRADE

Trade promotion

The Committee recognizes the immense importance of trade to the agriculture industry, with U.S. agricultural exports estimated at $140 billion per year and trade accounting for one in every five dollars of agricultural production value for American producers.

The Committee also notes that while the U.S. is now among the lowest-ranked nations in the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) in terms of support provided to producers, other countries like China are doing the opposite. According to the Office of the United States Trade Representative, in 2015 for three commodities (corn, rice, and wheat), China illegally exceeded permitted spending levels by more than $100 billion—in one year alone. Furthermore, the Committee understands that our trading partners have been substantially increasing publicly-funded support for export promotion in recent years; for example, the EU spends more promoting wine than the U.S. spends promoting all crops combined.

The Committee has heard from every segment of the agricultural industry about the importance of maintaining support for trade promotion and market development programs, especially considering the uncertainty of the current trade climate. While the Committee is confident that America's farmers and ranchers are incredibly efficient and can compete with anyone in the world on a level playing field, they simply cannot be expected to compete with foreign treasuries on their own.

In an effort to keep American agriculture competitive on the global stage, the Committee-reported bill streamlines existing authorities for the Market Access Program (MAP), the Foreign Market Development (FMD) Program, the Technical Assistance for Specialty Crops (TASC) Program, and the Emerging Markets Program (EMP) under one International Market Development Program, restoring funding for FMD and TASC, and establishing overall funding at $255 million per year, moving forward.

The Committee intends this streamlining effort to complement the recent reorganization within USDA by ensuring the newly established Under Secretary for Trade and Foreign Agriculture Affairs has the tools necessary to continue tearing down barriers to trade and opening up new markets to U.S. agricultural products.

The Committee wholeheartedly endorses both MAP and FMD as valuable tools in advancing our international trade interests with proven results and substantial net returns. The Committee encourages the agricultural industry to continue utilizing these programs in the most efficient manner possible, and urges MAP and FMD co-operators to leverage data and analytics to even more effectively target promotional efforts for U.S. products abroad.

The Committee also encourages the agricultural industry to take full advantage of TASC and EMP as the Committee is concerned that these programs have been undersubscribed in recent years. However, if these programs continue to be underutilized, the Committee intends to ensure the Secretary has the flexibility to use remaining funds to supplement the popular and often oversubscribed MAP and FMD programs.

Finally, in recognition of the increasing workload facing attorneys focusing on international trade agreements and disputes within USDA's Office of General Counsel, the Committee encourages the Secretary to maintain a minimum of four attorneys within such office dedicated specifically to these efforts.

International food aid and food security

For more than 60 years, the United States has played a leading role in global efforts to alleviate hunger and malnutrition through international food assistance—primarily through the donation or sale of U.S. agricultural commodities. Through an extensive review of U.S. international food aid and development programs, the Committee heard from the administering agencies, program implementers, producers, millers, manufacturers, and the maritime industry regarding their role in not only providing the tools necessary to respond to emergency feeding and development needs worldwide, but also their contribution to U.S. jobs in the agricultural, manufacturing, and maritime sectors. The stakeholders also made very clear, and the Committee acknowledges, the importance of maintaining broad domestic support for these programs, moving forward. In response, the Committee-reported bill modernizes and reauthorizes international food aid programs to reduce hunger while still recognizing the American farmer's critical and historic role in providing an affordable, safe, and reliable source of nutritious agricultural commodities that are delivered to millions in need around the globe through the help of the U.S maritime industry and private voluntary organizations.

As such, the Committee notes the variety of tools necessary to address hunger around the globe, whether through the provision of cash and vouchers, locally and regionally-procured foods, or U.S.-grown commodities. The Committee, however, also notes the increased flexibility provided in the 2014 Farm Bill, which coupled with existing flexibility in other food assistance programs, results in over 50 percent of food assistance being provided in modalities other than agricultural commodities. The Committee views this unprecedented level of flexibility as an adequate means of appropriately responding to the diversity of existing and forecasted needs and expects USAID to adhere to the intent of the program in its implementation and selection of food aid modalities.

Food for peace

Labeling requirements

Despite providing the lion's share of international food assistance, the Committee is concerned that U.S. contributions may sometimes be underrepresented on related materials including benefit cards and vouchers. The Committee believes review of current printed material labeling practices is warranted, and intends that the level of U.S. assistance be made abundantly clear to reflect the proportional generosity of the American people.

Local sale and barter of commodities

The Committee supports monetization, which is the resale of U.S. commodities in recipient countries to generate development funding. However, the Committee also acknowledges implementing agency challenges regarding monetization and no longer requires a 15 percent minimum for monetization within Food for Peace. The Committee still directs the continued use of this practice wherever market conditions dictate, as deemed appropriate by implementers and local entities.

Minimum levels of assistance

The Committee reauthorizes the required minimum commodity levels at not less than 2,500,000 metric tons for emergency assistance and not less than 1,875,000 metric tons for non-emergency assistance as previously outlined in law. While the Committee acknowledges these minimums are often not met for a variety of reasons, the Committee encourages the Administrator to closely review all opportunities in which commodities can be used effectively to carry out the purposes of the Food for Peace Act.

Funding for program oversight, monitoring, and evaluation

In response to an agency request that funding for program oversight, monitoring, and evaluation fluctuate with appropriated funding levels, the Committee replaced the static $17,000,000 set-aside for program oversight, monitoring, and evaluation with the authority for 1.5 percent of program appropriations to be used on such activities. The Committee acknowledges the importance of oversight, monitoring, and evaluation to overall program integrity and intends for this programmatic change to reflect that priority.

The Committee has been disappointed in the extent to which USAID has utilized the Famine Early Warning Systems Network (FEWS NET) to provide advance information regarding drought in areas where livestock production is a critical source of food and income. Livestock production has long-term cycles, and the Committee expects—to every extent possible—information on droughts predicted by FEWS NET should be translated into action, program investment, and interventions to mitigate avoidable negative outcomes including the loss of entire breeding herds due to a lack of forage or water.

Assistance for stockpiling and rapid transportation, delivery, and distribution of shelf-stable prepackaged foods

The Committee expresses wholehearted support for American producers of Ready-to-Use Therapeutic Foods (RUTF) that create domestic jobs, utilize U.S. commodity inputs, and save millions of lives by providing fortified, nutrient-dense products to vulnerable populations around the world suffering from severe acute malnutrition. The statutory reference to this subset of food aid providers has been updated to the International Food Relief Partnership to reflect industry terminology. The World Bank estimates malnutrition can reduce a country's GDP by as much as 10 percent, and the Committee recognizes the importance of higher GDPs across the globe contributing to not only better lives for those in-country, but also stronger markets for American agricultural products. The Committee commends the innovation of the International Food Relief Partnership that contributes to the U.S. economy and national security.

Consideration of impact of provision of agricultural commodities and financial assistance on local farmers and economy

At the Committee's request, the U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO) completed a report on USAID and USDA's use of required market impact analysis, known as Bellmon determinations, before signing assistance agreements. The Bellmon process is designed to ensure U.S. food assistance does not negatively impact recipient agricultural markets. GAO found the involved agencies do not consistently complete these determinations before distributing aid. The Committee expects USAID and USDA to complete Bellmon determinations in a timely manner to appropriately use American resources and best serve recipients. Further, given the range of flexibility in the delivery of food assistance, the Committee emphasizes the importance of assessing the potential impacts of all modalities of food assistance.

Prepositioning of agricultural commodities

The Committee notes that the use of prepositioning has been proven to reduce the average delivery timeframe for emergency food aid. In fact, GAO estimates that on average, compared with USAID's standard shipping process, the use of prepositioned food aid reduces delivery time by one to two months. The Committee recognizes prepositioning of American commodities as a valuable tool in the fight against global hunger and encourages an increase in the use of prepositioning to ensure vulnerable populations receive the life-saving nourishment needed in a timelier manner.

Annual report regarding food aid programs and activities

The Committee notes the annual report on food aid programs and activities has consistently been submitted after the statutory deadline. USAID and USDA should cooperate to ensure annual reporting of food assistance is provided in a timely and transparent manner to inform lawmakers about recent activities and support important policy decisions. If the report will not be submitted by the deadline, the Administrator and the Secretary must notify the Committee with pertinent information including why the delay has occurred and when the report will be provided. The Committee further affirms that data included in the report can and should be made available to the public, as appropriate, as the data becomes available, even if that is prior to the full report being finalized. Finally, the Committee expects USAID to provide a more comprehensive and detailed explanation of the uses of funds set aside to carry out 202(e) of the Act as well as those used for internal transportation, storage, and handling purposes. The Committee cannot and will not support sweeping changes to such provisions without a better understanding of how such funds are currently being utilized and any legal obstacles within the current framework.

Minimum level of nonemergency food assistance

The Committee emphasizes the ongoing importance of non-emergency development assistance, and seeks to make clear the authority of the Administrator to count Community Development

Funds (CDF) toward the “safebox” minimum. Such a change, however, should not be interpreted as a departure from ardent support of development activities, or an intent to reduce aggregate funding dedicated to such purpose. Nonemergency development assistance complements capacity building to strengthen resiliency and transition countries from food aid recipients to trading partners. The Committee strongly believes promoting agricultural development, especially in Africa and other rapidly developing growth markets, is in our national interest.

John Ogonowski and Doug Bereuter Farmer-to-Farmer Program

The Farmer-to-Farmer Program was designed to leverage the expertise of volunteers from U.S. farms, universities, and other agricultural entities to assist host-country farmers in specific, short-term projects that are technical in nature. The Committee contends the best use of program resources is on technical projects, and recognizes the importance of strengthened communication and project coordination to ensure volunteer areas of expertise are of direct benefit to host country needs. Additionally, the Committee-reported bill calls for sequenced assignments to build longer-term continuity and increase capacity building within the program. The Committee commends Farmer-to-Farmer for utilization of retired agricultural extension personnel within the program, and hopes to see increased participation from this knowledgeable pool of potential volunteers.

Good governance and social accountability

The Committee recommends that good governance and social accountability approaches be included in all development food security activities carried out under Food for Peace. These approaches empower citizens to improve their own food security by holding governments and institutions accountable, and by ensuring they are transparent and responsive to community needs. The Committee is encouraged by evidence demonstrating that social accountability programs improve service delivery and overall project outcomes, which can accelerate the graduation of Food for Peace program participants successfully off the program and promote the transition of programs toward full country ownership.

Local and regional food aid procurement projects

The Local and Regional Food Aid Procurement (LRP) Program complements in-kind programs, especially the McGovern-Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program (McGovern-Dole Program), which supports school feeding projects around the world. Authorized within the 2014 Farm Bill after a successful pilot program, LRP allows USDA to assist local farmers and communities in building the capacity to produce food used in local schools with an emphasis on meeting quality standards and product specifications, ensuring food safety and nutritional content within each project. USDA works with recipients to address market sensitivities in local and regional purchases. The Committee supports continued and enhanced use of this program to complement in-kind food aid programming and to appropriately serve recipients, including children benefitting from the McGovern-Dole Program.

Bill Emerson Humanitarian Trust

The Bill Emerson Humanitarian Trust (BEHT) was created as a reserve under the Secretary's authority for the use of commodities in times of emergency. The Committee reaffirms the 2008 change that transitioned the trust from a reserve of actual commodities to a reserve fund to be used for the purchase of commodities to provide aid when unforeseen food needs arise. As the United States seeks to assist those suffering as a result of recent famine and natural disaster, over $281 million currently sits available within the BEHT. The Committee believes the time has come to access this vital reserve, and hopes the Secretary and the Administrator will seriously consider using these funds to provide commodities in areas impacted by the current famines.

Food for Progress

The Committee affirms the importance and effectiveness of Food for Progress in delivering non-emergency development assistance, serving many of those most in need around the world. It is also an appropriate avenue, among currently approved uses of the program, to address the need to increase productivity via improved access to agricultural inputs for smallholder farms, particularly in Africa. While corn yields for farmers in Africa average around 30 bushels per acre, U.S. corn yields are over 175 bushels per acre. For many farmers in developing countries, these types of yield gaps could be dramatically reduced by having local access to seeds, fertilizer, and other basic production inputs and services. Those inputs and services can often be delivered via public-private partnerships to establish commercial value chain systems that serve communities and improve food security well beyond the involvement of Food for Progress.

McGovern-Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program

U.S.-sponsored school feeding projects continue to reduce hunger in children around the world. The Committee notes the McGovern-Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program's critical nature and seeks to ensure the program's primary focus remains on providing food. Such a focus more appropriately aligns with USDA expertise and allows other agencies, organizations, and funding sources to be used on complementary services.

The Committee-reported bill directs USDA to ensure when possible that deliveries of agricultural commodities within the McGovern-Dole Program correspond with recipient school term start dates. Similarly, subsequent deliveries should take academic calendars into account to provide agricultural commodities appropriately throughout the term. This prioritization will foster program effectiveness and further incentivize students to consistently attend school.

Additionally within the program, the Committee recognizes the importance of local engagement for the sustainability of school feeding programs beyond the U.S.'s involvement. The program is most successful when the government of the recipient country is engaged and supports school feeding as a national requirement, or is at a minimum transitioning in that direction. The Committee urges the Secretary to require eligible organizations to indicate agreement in grant proposals between the government and the implementing partner regarding transition plans and timelines, including milestones for the program's successful transition to local institutions, to facilitate greater progress toward the graduation requirement, and build successful transitions to nationally funded and operated school feeding programs.

International technical assistance

The Committee encourages the Secretary to compile and make publicly available information from appropriate mission areas including the Food, Nutrition, and Consumer Services (FNCS) related to international food security. Additionally, the Secretary should provide technical assistance to entities seeking food insecurity expertise related to international program development as long as the technical assistance does not place undue cost or burden on the Department.

Cochran and Borlaug fellowship programs

Within both the Borlaug International Agricultural Science and Technology Fellowship program and Cochran Fellowship Program, the Committee encourages the Secretary to leverage the impact of the program by connecting newly-trained fellows with one another and with U.S. government-sponsored agricultural development and research projects in their home countries. Further, maintenance of a fellowship network would boost U.S. development efforts and strengthen foreign agricultural self-sufficiency.

Additionally, within the Borlaug and Cochran Fellowships, the Committee notes the intangible benefit of increased connection to, and appreciation for, the United States; along with technical education. As the Secretary seeks added efficiency and cost-effective programming, the Committee acknowledges that in-country training may sometimes be appropriate as opposed to training within the United States. The Committee seeks to maintain programmatic intent, but wants to allow flexibility where it may be helpful.

The Committee recognizes Norman Borlaug as one of the most influential agricultural leaders in world history. The Borlaug Fellowship pays tribute to his legacy through critical food security training and research across the globe. Although the Committee creates a new provision within the Borlaug Fellowship, in no case should the newly included programming detract in purpose or appropriations from the existing fellowship program.

The new provision within the Borlaug Fellowship allows the Secretary to offer fellowships to U.S. citizens with relevant education in agricultural extension and training to be placed in eligible countries. The Committee recognizes that youth engagement is critical for agricultural development. The Committee believes this provision will provide valuable opportunities to young agriculturalists in eligible countries—a growing and critical population with a need for increased access to agricultural knowledge and skills in order to enhance food security in their respective countries. Participation in such a fellowship will also provide valuable work experience for emerging American agricultural leaders.

Global Crop Diversity Trust

The Committee affirms the importance of the Global Crop Diversity Trust for ensuring the conservation and availability of crop diversity for food security worldwide. The Committee makes a statutory adjustment to the aggregate percentage of allowable support based on concerns that the release of funds to the Trust is impacted by the form of international contributions to the Trust, which can include amounts outside of the endowment, including concessional loans and operational support. In recent years, the Committee notes the full amount appropriated to USAID has not been released to this program because of claims the U.S. is at or near the statutory 25-percent threshold for contribution, but in fact, when donations into other categories of funding for the Global Crop Diversity Trust are included, the U.S. is far from reaching the maximum threshold. However, this change should not reduce any program funding, including appropriations made available to the Consultative Group on International Agricultural Research (CGIAR) and Feed the Future Innovation Labs.

TITLE IV—NUTRITION

Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program

The Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) currently offers nutrition assistance to 42 million individuals, providing an average benefit of $254 per household. Total SNAP-related funding in FY 2017 was $68 million, which includes benefits, administration, nutrition education, employment and training, and program integrity. Total benefits provided to households in FY 2017 summed to $63.7 million.

In the 114th Congress, the Committee on Agriculture embarked upon a comprehensive review and hearing series of SNAP entitled, Past, Present, and Future of SNAP. The hearing series included 21 hearings and the testimony of 81 witnesses—the latter including experts, program administrators, front-line operators, and most importantly, SNAP recipients. The Committee notes that throughout this hearing series, Members—regardless of party affiliation—engaged on the importance of work, the necessity for increased funding to support those who are work-capable, and the necessity to address administrative challenges. The review provided the evidence necessary for the meaningful reforms included in the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018—reforms to a program which continues to help the most vulnerable Americans during their time of need while assisting those able to move toward sustainable employment and self-sufficiency.

The SNAP reforms included in H.R. 2 are a critical part of the Committee's ongoing responsibility to oversee and improve the nation's foremost nutrition program. The Committee modernizes program delivery, closes program loopholes, improves program integrity, invests in employment and training programs, incentivizes healthy purchases, and enhances nutrition education programs.

Modernize and enforce asset tests and general program administration, streamline State options, reform quality control metrics, and hold States and retailers accountable to combatting fraud, waste, and abuse.

The Committee establishes the Duplicative Enrollment Database (DED), an interstate database system for States to utilize when making eligibility determinations to ensure households are not receiving SNAP benefits in multiple States. The DED is based on the National Accuracy Clearinghouse (NAC) pilot project that tested the detection and prevention of duplicate participation by beneficiaries of SNAP. The NAC was piloted in five southeastern States with much success, saving $5.6 million in just one year. The Committee encourages the Department and States to build on the success of the NAC pilot, and to act expeditiously in implementing the DED. Further, the Committee highlights its concern that there is no complete or comprehensive data on SNAP recipients or program success. The Committee holds that if there is no evaluation of participant tenure on the program, there can be no measure of program success. To rectify this lack of data necessary to measure and improve program design and effectiveness, the bill also requires States to capture data on SNAP participants in their State and submit reports to the Secretary.

The passage of the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity and Reconciliation Act of 1996 afforded States the opportunity to use categorical—automatic—eligibility to confer SNAP eligibility to households receiving benefits from other low-income assistance programs, i.e., Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF). As of 2018, 42 States use broad-based categorical eligibility (BBCE) to waive asset tests; and 31 of those 42 States use it to simultaneously raise the gross income limits of SNAP eligibility parameters by permitting households to use the asset and gross income test of the alternate assistance program, thereby conferring eligibility to those households receiving TANF-funded brochures or hotline numbers. The Committee limits categorical eligibility to households that are determined eligible for cash assistance, or ongoing and substantial assistance, or services (e.g., child care, transit, and counseling) for programs that are income-tested at 130% FPL (200% FPL for households with elderly or disabled individuals). The Committee notes that this provision also takes into consideration the testimony heard in the aforementioned hearing series, and Members' requests for a more standardized approach to categorical eligibility. It is estimated that less than one percent of SNAP recipients would be impacted by this change, but is also important to note that the regular channels of SNAP eligibility remain available.

The Committee recognizes that most asset tests have not been updated since the 1970s and sees the need for updated asset tests in coordination with the improvements in categorical eligibility. Accordingly, the bill modernizes asset testing for SNAP households. Overall asset limits for households increase from $2,250 to $7,000 (indexed annually for inflation), and for households with an elderly or disabled member it increases from $3,500 to $12,000 (indexed annually for inflation). The bill also allows SNAP participants to maintain up to $2,000 (indexed annually for inflation) in savings accounts that do not count toward a household's assets for eligibility determinations. SNAP households that attempt to save and prepare for life's uncertainties will no longer be penalized for doing so, and allowing for additional funds in savings means a household is more likely to gain the strong footing it needs to ultimately move up and off the program.

Additionally, the bill excludes the first $12,000 in value (indexed annually for inflation) of one vehicle per licensed driver in a SNAP household. The Committee recognizes the need for access to reliable transportation, particularly in rural areas, to get to and from work, school, and the grocery store. The Committee believes all households nationwide need this sort of access; as a result, the bill eliminates the option to use TANF vehicle rules. The modernization of asset limits is good, sensible policy.

The Committee eliminates a loophole in SNAP eligibility and benefit determinations related to Standard Utility Allowances for heating and cooling costs (HCSUA). Currently, many States automatically grant an HCSUA to households without heating and cooling expenses, and this HCSUA is then used in the calculation of household benefits. The practice falsely inflates household benefits. This is most often done via States providing nominal heating and cooling cost assistance of just over $20 to households through Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) payments. The Committee notes that the changes in this bill do not change the basis of the normal pathway of qualifying for the HCSUA—incurring a heating or cooling expense. Further, the change is not applicable to households with an elderly member, and those households continue to be eligible for the HCSUA if they receive heating and cooling assistance of more than $20. The Committee also notes the ability of States to decide how they will verify a household has incurred utility costs and expects that States may make adjustments in those requirements for additional vulnerable households.

Benefits for the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program are based on USDA calculations of the cost of food. However, SNAP benefits can become out-of-date based on inconsistent review of the Thrifty Food Plan (TFP). The Committee requires that the TFP be re-evaluated every five years to ensure it reflects current eating habits of Americans, including patterns of food preparation, and the items most often purchased by consumers.

The Committee notes two significant issues related to child support, and the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 takes important steps to address both. States have the option to treat legally obligated child support payments as an income exclusion rather than a deduction, impacting SNAP benefit determinations. Additionally, States do not enforce child support orders, thus discouraging parents to be the first avenue of support for their children. The Committee directs that child support payments made to non-household members be treated as an exclusion from income (rather than a deduction), encouraging child support payments by excluding the amount paid from the payer's gross income. Additionally, the Committee requires child support cooperation for both custodial and non-custodial parents, given that parents should be the first avenue of support before government intervention. The Committee also notes that the elimination of SNAP disqualification for parents who pay child support, but who may be behind schedule, is an incentive for those parents to continue to make payments, rather than stop making payments entirely.

In the SNAP hearing series, the Committee learned that there are some active-duty military personnel who require SNAP to provide for their families. While the rate of military pay is well beyond the jurisdiction of the Committee, and is a much more critical determinant of a household's wellbeing and financial and food security than any SNAP eligibility rule, the Committee takes an important step toward addressing concerns about active-duty military households. The Committee provides that up to $500 in a household's Basic Allowance for Housing (BAH) should not be included in the calculation of household income. This level of exclusion guarantees that those households which are truly most vulnerable and most likely to be food-insecure can be eligible for SNAP. In doing so, the Committee also protects against potential double-counting by ensuring that only actual housing expenses that exceed the amount of the BAH are to be used in the calculation of the excess shelter deduction.

The Committee has significant concerns regarding companies associated with the handling of Electronic Benefit Transfer (EBT) transactions who have predatory contracts between EBT processors. In response, the Committee disallows the charging of fees for switching or routing SNAP benefits. EBT systems successfully handle eight million transactions per day, nearly three billion per year. The establishment of a National Gateway provides USDA with necessary oversight over the flow of EBT transactions, helping to control costs and allowing USDA to develop additional tools to ensure the integrity of SNAP and its related transactions is upheld. The National Gateway also assists in controlling access to individuals' payment information, and enables the discussion of new payment technologies. The provision regarding the prohibition of fees as noted previously is also maintained.

The Committee is dissatisfied by the rate of implementation of the pilot established in the Agricultural Act of 2014 for the online delivery of benefits. Online entities have the potential to significantly improve access, including access to perishable items, for food-insecure households, and particularly those not located in close proximity to a retail food store. The Committee believes online delivery will assist in improving food access in food deserts in both rural and urban America. The Committee encourages the Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) to implement and evaluate the pilot expeditiously, and directs that upon the completion of the online delivery pilot, the Secretary shall approve the acceptance of benefits through online transactions nationwide.

The Federal Government has a responsibility to evaluate SNAP for both program improvement and program integrity. To do so, USDA needs sufficient access, in accordance with agreements with States, to State systems and records. In particular, this allows for more transparency and a greater ability to detect and reduce fraud. The Committee authorizes USDA access to records and information systems in order to better manage the program.

The Committee believes that to improve SNAP program design, it is important to have a clearer picture of items being purchased with SNAP funds. The Committee recognizes there is not a current system in place for collection of real-time, purchase-level data from SNAP-authorized retailers. As such, the Committee expects the Secretary to work with SNAP authorized retailers and their trade associations to devise an efficient way to share information about purchases made utilizing SNAP as a form of payment, giving consideration to the diversity of customers and purchases, geographic location, time of year, and day of the month. The Committee further recognizes that the Secretary's solution may include the use of information from syndicated data providers. The Secretary is encouraged to work with SNAP-authorized retailers who are able to efficiently share this information, recognizing that many SNAP-authorized retailers may face challenges such as technological constraints. The Committee recognizes the importance of guarding the information of SNAP recipients and SNAP-authorized retailers and provides strong protections for the privacy of both.

SNAP is often lauded as having a low error rate, ignoring the fact that any underpayment or overpayment error under $37 is ignored. The reported error rate for SNAP should be based on all errors, not errors below this arbitrary threshold. The Committee notes that no other safety net program with an error rate has a similar error tolerance threshold. Further, the Committee notes that the adjustment in the reported error rate in no way impacts the dollar value at which States must establish claims to recoup overpayment of benefits, which are set elsewhere in regulation with options for alternative State thresholds.

The Committee notes significant abuse resulting from the incentives to miscalculate error rates in response to State performance bonuses. The Committee has ongoing concerns about perverse incentives created by the State performance bonuses, in addition to a general expectation that States should not need a bonus to administer practices that should be standard operating procedures. These are more than sufficient reasons to end State bonuses while continuing to uphold the measurement of State performance. States will continue to be held responsible for administering SNAP, and legally bound to processing applications in a timely manner, ensuring households receive the accurate amount of SNAP benefits, and making certain the program is administered in the most effective and efficient manner.

Implement and mandate constructive and empowering work requirements that are balanced with a strong investment in proven tactics to assist recipients in climbing the economic ladder

It is the intent of Congress to augment—not change—the purpose of SNAP to include an increase in those employed, encourage healthy marriage, and to promote prosperous self-sufficiency, all the while continuing to strengthen the agricultural economy and providing for improved levels of nutrition among low-income households through a cooperative program.

The Committee recognizes that insufficient, vague, and unenforceable work requirements—further undermined by State bureaucrats who find loopholes to waive individuals from participating—dissuade employment and restrict opportunities for SNAP recipients. The requirement for Able-Bodied Adults Without Dependents (ABAWDs) has failed to be implemented equitably across States, and where it has been implemented, has failed to incentivize employment. The general work requirement for those 18–59—an acknowledge exercise on an eligibility form—produces no results and allows for almost 10 million individuals to remain on the rolls with no incentive to change their outlook or that of their family. Additionally, current Employment and Training (E&T) services are inadequate and underfunded, resulting in scattered programs and minimal participation.

The Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 pairs a realistic, supportive, and simplified work requirement with funding for States to provide guaranteed and improved options to move participants toward improved wages, higher quality employment, and independence of government aid. The bill does this by way of establishing a substantive work requirement for all work-capable adults age 18–59, thus eliminating both the general work requirement and the ABAWD time limit, with exemptions for specific populations including the elderly and disabled, the caretaker of a child under the age of six or of an incapacitated child, or those who are pregnant. This work-capable population will be prepared for work through a modernized and historic investment in E&T, that which provides an enhanced suite of ancillary services like assessments, case management, and updated and evidence-based activities.

To ensure this investment yields results, the Committee’s intent is that these requirements are mandatory; again, the Committee has been provided with a unique opportunity to expand funding for these life-changing programs by closing loopholes and improving opportunities for individuals who have been marginalized by a lack of employment, education, and life circumstance. For 20 hours per week, and increasing to 25 hours per week in 2026, work-capable adults must work, participate in a work program (e.g., WIOA), or participate in SNAP E&T. The Committee’s intent is that each State will offer a slot to every eligible adult, and in the event a State fails to do so, they are penalized via administrative sanction or funding penalty. If the State fails to fulfill this obligation, the eligible participant is not penalized. If the participant refuses or fails to participate, and good cause has been considered and deemed inapplicable, the participant is no longer eligible for SNAP for a period of 12 months. Each subsequent determination of failure to participate results in an ineligibility period of 36 months.

States will maintain the ability to both exempt up to 15% of their work-capable and eligible population, as well as the opportunity to apply for waivers in times of high unemployment. The 15% exemption is meant to excuse individuals who need short-term reprieve from participation, or for those specific populations the State determines must be excluded. Annual carryover of unused exemptions is no longer permitted. The Committee recognizes the problematic history of the practice of combining, or gerrymandering, areas to significantly increase the area covered by geographic waivers of the previous ABAWD work requirement. To address this, the Committee restricts waivers to “individual areas,” with the intent that States; counties, parishes, and other county-equivalents; and metropolitan statistical areas be considered individual areas. The Committee notes that the Secretary’s regulatory language shall reflect as such, and not provide consideration for any areas smaller than a county or county-equivalent. As an example, the Committee does not intend for areas considered “community districts” to qualify for waivers. The Committee prohibits the combining of any of these aforementioned types of individual areas to increase the areas subject to a waiver. Lastly, as it pertains to these waivers, it is the Committee's intent to provide the Secretary with discretion as it relates to the acceptance or denial of them; waivers shall not be readily approved based on the criteria set forth in the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018.

While the Committee emphasizes that there is no benefits cliff in SNAP because program benefits adjust relative to increases in income, the Committee recognizes that other low-income assistance programs often result in a significant drop (or "cliff") in household income when an individual loses eligibility for those programs. In order to help address this, the Committee provides that all States will offer five months of SNAP benefits for individuals who are transitioning off of TANF cash assistance.

The Committee believes in and emphasizes the importance of work as a means to improve household food security, far more so than the benefits provided by SNAP. The earned income deduction is increased by 10% (to 22%) of earned income. This is a direct increase in benefits to households with earned income.

Broaden the consumption of healthy foods and readjust nutrition education to better address the needs of low-income individuals

The Committee emphasizes the importance of healthy eating for all Americans, including SNAP participants. The Committee also highlights the Foods Typically Purchased by Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) Households report published by USDA in 2016, which found 20 percent of SNAP household spending was on items such as sweetened drinks, desserts, salty snacks, and candy. Further, the Committee recognizes that there is additional opportunity to leverage the year-round access and convenience provided by retail food stores.

The Retailer-Funded Incentives Pilot provides $120 million per year to supplement up to 25% of the value of bonuses retailers are authorized to provide to SNAP recipients for the purchase of minimally processed fruits and vegetables, and dairy. The design of the program is left to the innovation of retailers, to be approved by the Secretary, but the Committee envisions it may include leveraging of existing store rewards programs.

The Committee notes the success of the Food Insecurity Nutrition Incentive (FINI) Program established by the Agricultural Act of 2014. FINI encourages the consumption of healthy foods, including fruits and vegetables. Historically, FINI was delivered at farmers' markets and the Committee believes providing an opportunity for retailers to deliver healthy incentives is vital because it allows potential year-round access to fresh fruits and vegetables for SNAP participants. Building on that success, the Committee reauthorizes FINI and establishes a training, evaluation, and information center for best practices, intended to improve effectiveness of applicants and recipients of FINI grants.

The Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 consolidates two existing nutrition programs carried out under two different authorities—Section 28 of the Food and Nutrition Act of 2008 and Section 1425 of the National Agricultural Research Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (with appropriations references to the Smith-Lever Act). In examining these programs, the Committee notes that the two programs, operated by two different agencies at USDA, encouraged and allowed duplication and inefficiency; although the education strategies employed by the programs are somewhat distinct, there is no policy rationale for separate programs. The Committee consolidated the best features of each program into a single, improved program, and established funding of $485 million per year in mandatory funding and up to $65 million per year in discretionary funding. The Committee directs NIFA and FNS to work cooperatively in the administration of the program, building on the expertise of each, and in coordination with the States and with the 1862 and 1890 Land-Grant Universities (LGUs) that receive the funding and partner with front-line operators to deliver nutrition education. State plans mandated by the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 are intended to create a unified nutrition education program in coordination, cooperation, and consultation with the State agency implementing the SNAP program. The eligible institutions (1862 and 1890 LGUs) will implement a program that includes partnerships with public and private entities as applicable that are positioned to advance the effective and efficient delivery of the program to eligible individuals. The Committee expects the 1862 and 1890 LGU institutions to collaborate and determine their appropriate roles, recognizing the capacity capabilities and unique abilities of each institution. In States with both 1862 and 1890 institutions, extension leadership will develop, submit, and implement an equitable plan for distribution of funds. Funding streams should appropriately recognize the effort expended by each institution in each State.

Further, the Committee expects the Secretary to ensure that any State eligible institution no longer has a substantive role in implementing State SNAP nutrition education plans is provided with focused technical assistance to ensure an effective, efficient transition to meet the new program delivery requirements. Further, for all States, the Committee encourages the Secretary to ensure that each State agency provides a transition strategy that adequately provides the Secretary assurance of an effective and efficient transition while working in good faith to minimize impacts on eligible individuals' access to services and benefits during this transition phase. The Committee expects NIFA and FNS to implement appropriate research strategies, especially within the LGU institutions, to ensure the constant improvement and efficacy of nutrition education. The statute establishes the requirement that NIFA's new administrative responsibilities in providing the nutrition education grants to State implementing agencies is to be conducted in consultation with FNS to guide effective program administration, as well as in the development of guidance and regulations as applicable, but provides for the Secretary to determine the practical roles and responsibilities therein. The Committee expects the Secretary to allocate administrative funds to both NIFA and FNS respectively that reflect each agency's administrative responsibilities, as determined by the Secretary, in accordance with the program and the Secretary's authority.

In addition, USDA currently utilizes the SNAP–Ed Program Development Team (SNAP–Ed PDT) to foster communication and understanding among Federal and State/university organizational systems and to provide leadership to professional/staff development and program planning, management, reporting, and evaluation. The Committee expects USDA to continue utilizing the SNAP–Ed PDT in the implementation of the nutrition education program established in the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018. The Committee intends that the 10 percent cap on administrative costs include the financial costs characterized by the following types of activities: dollar value of salaries and benefits associated with staff time dedicated to the administration of the nutrition education program; cost of training for performing administrative functions like record keeping and accounting, etc.; cost of reporting nutrition education program activities; operating costs; indirect costs for those administrative staff not covered above; and other overhead charges associated with administrative expenses (e.g., space, human resource services, etc.). The Committee requests a written report from the Secretary on implementation, including agency roles, administrative funds allocations to each agency with projected administrative costs for each agency to conduct effective oversight and administration, the Federal implementation strategy, State-level readiness status of eligible institutions for program implementation, as well as any remaining unresolved administrative and implementation objectives required by statute no later than 180 days following enactment.

The Committee builds on previous successes of The Emergency Food Assistance Program (TEFAP) with an increase of $60 million each fiscal year, with $20 million each fiscal year to be used to establish a Farm-to-Food Bank Program in each State. Currently, more than 20 States administer farm-to-food bank programs that direct excess agricultural products from farmers to food banks for distribution to low-income households. The intention of the Farm-to-Food Bank Program is for States to administer an agricultural surplus clearance program that prevents unnecessary waste and reduces loss in the agricultural industry, while providing an inexpensive source of healthy food for low-income families.

The Committee recognizes that there are a variety of viewpoints regarding the Scientific Report of the 2015 Dietary Guidelines Advisory Committee. The Committee encourages USDA to insist that more rigorous and science-based recommendations are considered, maintaining the scientific integrity necessary to improve nutrition-related outcomes.

In recognition of the significant program improvements the Committee directs in Subtitle A, the Committee provides $150 million in implementation funds to the Secretary.

TITLE V—CREDIT

The Committee understands that access to credit is crucial to America's rural economy, but more importantly to the health and success of family farmers, ranchers, and foresters. To that end, the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 provides greater flexibility to the Farm Service Agency (FSA) in facilitating programs that increase credit availability to rural America.

The Committee recognizes the diverse needs of producers of all sizes, experience, and backgrounds. To address these needs, the Committee maintains the loan levels and loan fund set-asides for beginning farmer and rancher operating loans and reauthorizes the microloans program to continue to provide greater access for beginning farmers and ranchers. In an effort to provide greater participation for beginning farmers and ranchers the Committee amends the Farm Ownership Loan Program to grant the Secretary enhanced flexibility to allow military experience or agricultural education to qualify for a portion of the 3-year farming or ranching experience requirement to become an eligible borrower.

The Committee notes that agricultural production is capital intensive, yet producers operate in markets with extremely slim margins. As such, the Committee-reported bill reauthorizes and increases the loan limitations for guaranteed farm ownership and operating loans to $1,750,000 to account for growing capital needs in rural America. Furthermore, the Committee-reported bill reauthorizes the conservation loan and loan guarantee program at $75,000,000 annually.

The Committee recognizes the important role the Farm Credit System and the national, regional, and community banks plan in providing credit to rural America. The Committee-reported bill clarifies the oversight authorities of the Farm Credit Administration (FCA) to ensure all participants in the System are in compliance with the Farm Credit Act. As such, the Committee-reported bill updates the Farm Credit Act of 1971 by eliminating references that are out of date based on current markets and regulations. Additionally, the Committee-reported bill grants the FCA civil enforcement authorities—similar to those of other agencies—enabling the agency to hold accountable employees of System institutions who have resigned or been terminated for up to six years following the employee's departure from the institution. This authority allows FCA to prevent ex-employees from simply leaving the System without any repercussions for potential malfeasance.

The Committee-reported bill modernizes the 1,000 acre limitations on farm mortgages sold to Farmer Mac. The Committee recognizes U.S. agriculture has undergone substantial structural changes over the last 30 years when the average size of crop farms was 589 acres. Many farms have consolidated and undergone substantial growth to become more resilient to the market realities of today. The Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 updates the limit to 2,000 acres, which will allow for the majority of all cropland to access the lending source while still holding true to servicing family farms that have grown overtime.

The Committee-reported bill extends the State Agricultural Mediation Program to help agricultural producers, their lenders, and other persons directly affected by the actions of USDA, resolve their disputes. The Committee recognizes mediation as a valuable tool for settling disputes in a variety of USDA program areas.

TITLE VI—RURAL DEVELOPMENT

The past thirty years have been a time of enormous transition for America. The technological revolution that was ushered in at the close of the cold war empowered ordinary Americans to create, invent, and remake our world in ways that few were able to comprehend at the time. It has produced a burst of innovation and wealth creation that knows few parallels in history.

Yet, like many other periods of rapid advancement, the effects of the change are felt unevenly. This innovation began with computers, but it became revolutionary when computers became communications tools and access points for a vast network of human knowledge. In less than a generation, the Internet has become the essential network for business, communications, information, and entertainment.

Despite the rapid and complete adoption of this technology in much of modern life, too many rural Americans have been locked out of the technological revolution, because they are unable to connect to the Internet.

The implications can be seen across rural America. It is notable in health care, where access to specialists and advances that are a few clicks away in urban hospitals cannot be reached in rural America. It is evident in the economy, where the latest technology to boost efficiency is dependent on centralized computing resources held in the cloud that cannot be reached in rural America. It is obvious in education, where research and lectures and data that are available in any suburban home cannot be reached in rural America. It is apparent in commerce where whole new industries that have flourished online cannot be reached in rural America. And is evident in our civic life, where citizen engagement and government outreach has moved to websites that cannot be reached in rural America.

Today, the inequities of life without reliable, high-speed Internet can be compared to those without the other modern networks that form the foundations of technological revolutions of the past: the transportation networks like canals, railroads, and interstates that create markets for commodities and goods; the energy networks like rivers and electrical grids that multiply the power of labor; and the communications networks like the telegraph and telephone that fractionalize time and distance.

The Internet is no less essential than these technologies for creating an interconnected, interdependent nation in which every American has the opportunity to participate fully in commercial and civic life. But it isn't just rural America that needs rural internet connectivity. As Mr. Craig Cook, Chief Operations Officer for Hill Country Telephone Cooperative, Inc. based in Ingram, Texas, explained to the Committee during his testimony on March 9, 2017: ". . . rural areas are extremely important, and providing them the same level of service that is available in urban areas is critically important, not only for the success of those rural areas, and enabling those rural areas to compete in a global economy, but also ensuring that urban areas are well served by the rural areas."

Reliable, high-quality access to the Internet fundamentally underpins the economic development needs of all of rural America, but it also enables rural Americans to contribute the talents and successes of its citizens to our national economy. Today, entire businesses and institutions exist solely within the confines of the Internet, inaccessible to those without a connection. The latest information, the broadest set of ideas, and the best options are not only invisible to those who cannot access the network, but also devoid of contributions from them. We are all poorer for their exclusion.

Against this backdrop, the Committee considered changes to the programs designed to promote economic and social development in rural America. The Committee-reported bill addresses several issues of priority for rural communities, including access to high quality health care services and affordable broadband connectivity, expanding credit and capital for infrastructure and economic development, and improving the coordination of neighboring rural communities. Yet, above all, it views the expansion of broadband internet access as the foundation on which rural prosperity and rural inclusion must be built.

Subtitle A—Improving Health Care In Rural Communities

While broadband Internet connectivity is the long-term infrastructure challenge that the Committee believes will underpin rural advancement in the years to come, rural Americans also face several immediate health care challenges that the reported bill seeks to address.

Throughout the 2018 Farm Bill process, the Committee has remained focused on the opioid crisis that is unfolding across the nation. The crisis demands a response from the whole of government and USDA has an important role to play in financing the infrastructure needed by communities and not-for-profits. The 2018 Farm Bill provides the Secretary the authority to prioritize those projects that can best help address this health crisis.

In addition to the opioid crisis, the Committee also recognizes the challenging economic conditions in farm and ranch country that are leading to a silent epidemic of suicides among agricultural families. As farm income has fallen precipitously, economic stress on families is growing, and the agricultural community is in need of reliable sources of mental health care.

In addition to these two specific health issues, rural Americans face a more generalized problem of access to health care services. Access to both medical care and medical insurance services is often more challenging for individuals outside of urban and suburban communities. To that end, the Committee reauthorizes the Distance Learning and Telemedicine Program and establishes a new program to assist farm and ranch organizations in establishing Association Health Plans for their members.

Section 6001 provides the Secretary with flexible and temporary authority to address a broad range of potential health crises in rural America. Today that health crisis is opioids, but the Committee-reported bill provides the Secretary the authority to address any future health crisis, by providing set-asides or priorities in several programs, including the Distance Learning and Telemedicine Program, the Community Facility Loan and Grant Programs, and the Rural Health and Safety Education Program.

The Committee encourages the Secretary to provide clear guidance to potential applicants about the types of projects that will qualify for prioritization. The Committee further reminds the Secretary that this authority is intended to accelerate the completion of projects that can have an impact on pressing rural health problems. We encourage the Secretary to establish a process for the expedited review of applications under this section and to further prioritize those applications that utilize or refurbish existing resources and structures, and can be completed simply and quickly.

Finally, it is the Committee's express purpose in enacting this section that the Secretary use this authority to immediately address the opioid crisis, in addition to any other similar future health challenge in rural America.

Section 6002 reauthorized and increased the authorization for the Distance Learning and Telemedicine program. The Committee believes that this program provides a critical link between rural patients and the health care services they need, but are often too far away to access.

Section 6003 reauthorizes the Farm and Ranch Stress Assistance Network with some modest modifications, to provide mental health services to those farmers and ranchers in need of assistance.

Section 6004 authorizes a new program to allow the Secretary to make loans to qualified Agricultural Associations to finance the establishment of new association health plans to serve agricultural businesses, their employees, and their families.

The Committee recognizes that the process for reconsidering the rules surrounding association health plans is ongoing and does not intend this language to disrupt or alter that process. It is the Committee's intent that these Agricultural Association Health Plans conform with the Executive Order to the Department of Labor to establish guidance for expanding AHPs under ERISA. In addition, the Committee urges the Department to look to this guidance in selecting and overseeing grants and loans made to State associations that organize to provide a health plan to farmers and the agriculture family.

The reported bill further empowers the Secretary to provide additional requirements on eligibility to be a qualified agricultural association. The Committee is supportive of restrictions that would generally limit the definition of "Qualified Agricultural Association" to one in which the members have an established, pre-existing relationship and a history of organized cooperation through membership in an existing State-based trade association or industry association, which has been in existence for at least three years prior to the establishment of the agricultural association health plan, prior to the offering of a health plan.

It is the Committee's belief that the Secretary should consider ways to promote long-term sustainability of Associations when making loans and grants under this section.

Subtitle B—Connecting Rural Americans to High Speed Broadband

Rural Broadband concerns were a high priority for members and stakeholders during the two rural infrastructure hearings the Committee held last year. The Committee focused on increasing deployment of broadband networks by solving two main problems: network obsolescence and the high cost of building in rural areas. The Committee-reported bill tackles both of these issues, in addition to other minor reforms aimed at improving program delivery.

Building future-proof networks

A consistent challenge in providing rural broadband is continuing improvement in the technology. Unlike telephone and electric service, the nature and quality of broadband service evolves on a yearly basis.

In his March 2017 testimony, Mr. Cook touched on the challenge of deploying technology that provides broadband-quality service over the long-term:

“ . . . one of the things that was included in my testimony was this term future-proof, and . . . really what we are talking about there is not only providing the best available service for the consumer today, but also providing long-term solutions. So . . . when you look at the growth of broadband, and now . . . nationally you are looking at a medium broadband speed of about 41 meg that is generally available across the Nation. When you look at the potential growth of that year over year of about 28 percent, it is not long before you realize that we are going to be at gig-level services that customers are going to be demanding.”

Ms. Jennifer L. Otwell, Vice President and General Manager, Totalcom Communications, De Leon, Texas, testified before the full committee on July 19, 2017, and pointed out the challenge of obsolescence when building broadband networks:

“If you are going to go through putting in a piece of fiber into the ground, you want it to be what will last for 20, 30 years. Some of those older networks, there is really not a midrange network. The older networks, they are already almost obsolete for what we are going to need them for in just a few years.”

The Committee recognizes that this rapid obsolescence of broadband technologies presents a unique challenge for communities with networks financed by the broadband program. As faithful stewards of taxpayer dollars, the Department is careful not to make loans to finance a network that would overbuild a network that it has already financed, regardless of the quality of the existing network. This helps to protect the taxpayer by ensuring the borrower has the subscriber base to pay back its loans.

Yet, for communities served by obsolete networks financed with 20 or 25 year loans, this policy can trap them for decades in a twilight zone of connectivity: a substandard network protected from overbuilding. To remedy this, the Committee-reported bill adopts new requirements for the broadband program, to better align the length of a loan with the expected ability of the network to provide broadband quality service over time.

Section 6101 requires the Secretary to promulgate a minimum broadband speed standard and to promulgate estimates of what those minimum broadband speeds will be 5, 10, 15, 20, and 30 years in the future. The section further prohibits the Secretary from making a loan to any project that would be unable to meet the estimated minimum broadband standards for the entire duration of the loan. The intent of this requirement is to align the service provided by a USDA-financed broadband network with the time that the service area is protected by USDA’s overbuilding rules.

The Committee expects that the longest loans offered under this new policy will be for those technologies that can be expected to provide broadband-quality service deep into the future, such as fiber optic networks. However, the section is technology neutral and will continue to provide loans to any broadband technology that is capable of meeting the expected service requirements during the term of the loan. For those technologies with lower maximum throughput speeds, the Committee anticipates shorter loan lengths.

It is the Committee’s goal that, wherever possible, the Department invest in the networks with the longest potential service life and greatest potential to be upgraded in the future. The Committee is committed to a build-it-right-the-first-time posture for new broadband projects.

During mark up, the Committee also considered and adopted an amendment that would further help those communities struggling with obsolete networks. For those networks financed with one-time grant funds, the Committee has adopted new language requiring those providers to upgrade their networks to modern standards. Without additional investments, on October 1, 2020, the areas served by these networks would be available for other potential providers to make applications to USDA to serve them under the new rules.

The Committee also considered and adopted an amendment during mark-up that would codify the current minimum standard of service for broadband networks at 25 Mbps download and 3 Mbps upload. The Committee believes that this standard is appropriate for today to define the minimum internet service as broadband-quality; however, it reminds the department that technological obsolescence is rapid and cautions the Secretary not to force rural residents to settle for service no better than that in the new networks it is financing.

Improving financial assistance for broadband service

The Committee also recognizes that the low-hanging fruit has likely already been financed and that further rural deployment of broadband is likely to face significant constraints on a network's subscribers being able to afford the loan repayments necessary to build out a system. To that end, the Committee has authorized the Secretary to provide additional assistance to applicants to reduce the cost of building networks in rural areas.

The Committee-reported legislation established a new grant program, which works in conjunction with the existing lending authorities under the Rural Electrification Act already used by the Secretary to finance broadband networks. Under Titles I, II, and VI the Secretary already makes loans to entities and would continue to make loans under those authorities.

Section 6102 allows projects eligible for a loan under one of those existing authorities the ability to qualify for a grant if the project meets certain additional requirements to provide service in rural areas. The Committee recognizes that the density, or lack thereof, in rural areas represents the most significant economic hurdle to deploying broadband internet networks. The limited subscriber base and high fixed costs of deploying infrastructure can present an insurmountable obstacle to providers in creating a "business case" for broadband investment in rural America. To this end, the Committee-reported bill scales up grant incentives for eligible borrowers who build networks in less-dense areas.

Section 6102 also authorizes the Secretary to provide grants to certain applicants in the form of payment assistance for certain applicants. This authority is a novel form of assistance intended to better protect the interests of taxpayers and build in accountability for borrowers. In developing the Farm Bill, the Committee is seeking to address the difficulties the Department faces in holding grant recipients accountable to their ongoing obligations. Like loan recipients, grant recipients enter into a long-term agreement with the government to provide service over time in exchange for the grant. They are also enjoined from disposing of their assets for a period of time without returning the grant funds to the government.

However, such agreements can prove difficult to enforce when a grantee fails to perform. The Committee believes that by structuring the assistance provided to an applicant as a loan and then allowing the Secretary to provide significant additional flexibility in setting the terms of loan, the Department and the borrower's ongoing relationship can be better represented and borrowers can be held accountable for their obligations to the government over the long-term, while still receiving significant additional assistance to build in very rural areas.

Additional provisions

The Committee reported legislation also makes numerous other changes to the broadband program to improve borrower access and accountability, simplify administration, and protect taxpayers.

Section 6114 was considered and adopted through amendment to the bill and it would permit the broadband program to make loans to finance middle mile infrastructure projects. The Committee recognizes the importance of these projects in providing connectivity to rural communities to the high-speed internet backbone that makes advanced retail deployments possible. Fiber to the Home, 5G wireless, and other advanced broadband services require high-speed, high-bandwidth connections to existing Internet backbone connections.

Section 6013 requires the Department to establish a separate guaranteed lending program for broadband. The Committee has seen the success of guaranteed lending in many other programs at the Department and believes that rural broadband communities could benefit from the same opportunity to access private credit to finance new networks.

Section 6104 authorizes the Secretary to allow applicants under other RD programs to utilize a portion of their awards to deploy broadband services. Recipients of funds under the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (CON Act) may utilize their award to deploy both retail broadband and other types of broadband infrastructure, including middle mile connections, conduit, and other infrastructure and facilities necessary to provide rural broadband connectivity. Recipients of assistance under Title I of the Rural Electrification Act borrowers, may utilize up to 10% of their award to provide retail service.

The Committee has chosen to limit this authorization largely to areas that currently do not have broadband provided at the current minimum broadband speeds, with two important exceptions. Recipients of funding under CON Act programs may utilize up to 10% of their award to install non-retail broadband infrastructure, and recipients of funding under Title I of the Rural Electrification Act may provide service in areas under the existing Section 601(d) rules.

The Committee looks forward to seeing the innovative ways communities will utilize this new flexibility.

Section 6105 replaces the unfunded Rural Gigabit Program with the Innovative Broadband Advancement Program. The Innovative Broadband Advancement Program is designed to demonstrate innovative broadband technologies and methods of deployment that will significantly reduce the cost of deploying broadband in rural areas and be replicated by others in other rural areas. The program is significantly more flexible than the program it replaces, and the Committee believes that it will provide innovative companies and communities the opportunity to lead the way in developing technologies that will be of benefit to all of rural America.

Section 6106 expands the Department's broadband reporting requirements to cover the new grant program established in this bill, as well all as of the other loan and grant programs which provide broadband service, including Community Connect, the Distance Learning and Telemedicine Program, and the new Omnibus Loan/Grant Broadband Program.

Section 6107 provides certainty to broadband borrowers by enabling them to be notified of their loan application acceptance, before they undertake costly historic or environmental reviews. No applicant would be able to draw on USDA funds until every required review has been completed, but by resequencing the process, borrowers will be better positioned to undertake reviews, knowing that there will be funds available to them when they have been satisfactorily completed.

Sections 6108–6112 make changes designed to improve the administration of the broadband program and simplify applicant compliance. Notably, the Committee-reported bill improves the Secretary's ability to refinance debt held by applicants to better protect the government by securing a first-lien on a borrower's assets.

Overbuilding and regulatory coordination

The Committee is mindful of the concerns that many stakeholders who are deploying broadband in and near rural areas have about the Department subsidizing networks that overbuild existing networks, both those that are financed through the FCC's high-cost program and those that were financed entirely with private capital.

The Committee notes the significant work that was undertaken during the previous Farm Bill to strengthen reporting and disclosure requirements and has worked to build on that progress with the changes made in this Farm Bill. The Committee intends for the Department to continue to enforce its existing requirements to limit overbuilding of existing RUS borrowers and areas that already have broadband-quality service. The Committee believes that no one is well served when government programs duplicate services or replicate private sector investments.

The Committee also notes the work by the Department and the FCC to better harmonize existing USDA lending programs and the FCC's high cost program. However, we believe that much more can be done to strengthen the coordination between these two programs. The Committee recognizes that there are different minimum broadband speeds for USDA's broadband programs and the FCC's broadband program, which could lead to USDA financing networks that compete with networks subsidized by the FCC. Where there is coordination to be had between USDA and the FCC on broadband programs, it should begin with raising standards to promote broadband networks that will provide long-term, quality broadband service for rural residents and communities.

The Committee reminds the Department, the FCC, stakeholders, and the public that the overarching goal of the Committee is for rural residents to have affordable access to broadband internet services that is comparable to the service offered to urban and suburban Americans. Rural Americans cannot and should not be left out of the modern economy because of bureaucratic infighting and unrelated political considerations.

Other matters

As the USDA develops financing, policy and other aspects related to rural broadband development, the Committee requests USDA take into account Sec. 2110 of the FAA Extension, Safety, and Security Act of 2016. This will ensure communication towers providing broadband services in rural areas that meet the specifications described in Section 2110 are properly marked and entered into a FAA database to protect the safety of aerial applicators, aerial firefighters, public health applicators, medevac units, law enforcement and other low-flying aircraft.

Finally, the Committee recognizes the intense change that the broadband program has been under through the past decade and directs the Secretary to develop rules with all due haste, but to continue to implement the program as those rules are being developed.

Subtitle C—Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act

The Committee-reported bill reauthorizes the important infrastructure and economic development programs in the CON Act, including the water and waste loan and grant programs, the community facilities programs, and rural business programs.

In addition, it makes several important changes to encourage regional cooperation and to expand access to credit for mid-sized regional communities.

Regional economic development

Section 6201 of the bill reauthorizes and simplifies the Strategic Economic and Community Development Program. The Committee has heard from the Department, as well as economic development stakeholders about the importance of incentivizing regional-focused economic development initiatives.

The Committee-reported bill provides the Secretary with significant latitude in determining the eligible programs and appropriate set-asides to ensure there are sufficient resources to meet the demands of eligible applicants.

Expanding access to credit for rural communities

Section 6202 of the Committee-reported bill expands opportunities for rural communities to obtain credit through the guaranteed lending programs of the community facilities, water and waste, and broadband programs. The section expands availability of credit to all rural areas for higher education and critical services, investing in rural community colleges, hospitals, fire stations and other regional-serving institutions.

While the Committee continues to reserve direct lending and grant opportunities under these programs for smaller communities, it provides the opportunity for any community that meets the statutory definition of “rural” to access the guaranteed lending under those programs. These communities, while larger than the currently-eligible communities under these programs, nonetheless face similar challenges in accessing the necessary loans to finance infrastructure deployment.

Section 6203 requires the Secretary to collect fees for guaranteed lending sufficient to offset the cost of providing the subsidy. The Committee realizes that expanding access to guaranteed lending programs requires a commensurate increase in the availability of resources to support the lending program. By making the programs self-supporting, additional loan guarantees can be provided to meet the needs of the larger borrowing class.

The Committee recognizes that it may take several years for the programs to become self-supporting, so it continues to provide the appropriators the authorization to appropriate funds to support lending under these programs. The Committee encourages the Appropriations Committee to work with the Department and the Lending Community to establish a program level and a fee structure that supports our rural communities.

As guaranteed lending grows, it will also become necessary for USDA to streamline and standardize its approval process for these programs. The Secretary is encouraged to take steps to ensure that lenders receive timely responses and similar treatment of their applications, no matter where in rural America the project is located. The Committee believes that centralization or regionalization of application processing, as well as increased use of technology, can provide applications with faster, more consistent review that will safeguard taxpayer dollars while still expanding access to credit for rural institutions.

Community water systems

Section 6205 of the Committee-reported bill makes two important changes to the Rural Water and Wastewater Technical Assistance and Training Programs.

First, the Section provides the opportunity for entities to offer business-planning assistance to small water systems. In addition to the traditional technical assistance provided to systems for immediate, day-to-day operations, the section also authorizes the Secretary to make grants to entities, often the same entities providing the technical assistance, to offer long-term sustainability planning, including assistance on consolidation, partnerships, or service contracts.

Second, the section increases the authorization to ensure that sufficient resources are available to the Secretary to provide for adequate assistance.

Prison populations

Section 6218 of the Committee-reported bill provides the Secretary the authority to more accurately count the residents of a rural community. The section, as amended, provides latitude when considering an application from a community that hosts a jail or prison facility which is above a population threshold. It would permit the Secretary to consider certain individuals, who are incarcerated on a long-term or on a regional basis, from being not part of an applicant’s community.

When an individual is incarcerated for long periods of time, they are unlikely to be able to utilize or support a project financed through rural development. While they will someday return to a community, for the period of their incarceration they cannot support a project and should not be included for the purposes of determining a community's size.

Likewise, there are some communities that host regional jail facilities, which temporarily hold individuals from outside the host communities on a short-term basis. These individuals, who are temporarily held, should be counted not in the community that hosts the jail, but in the community in which they live.

The Committee recognizes the challenges posed by trying to accurately assess rural populations. It directs the Secretary to provide rural communities which host correctional facilities the opportunity to provide supplemental population data solely for the purposes of qualifying for rural development programs.

It is not the Committee's intent to marginalize, disenfranchise, ignore, or otherwise neglect any individual, no matter where he or she lives or if he or she is incarcerated. The Committee's sole concern is establishing the total number of individuals who will utilize and support a particular project or service so that the Department can appropriately judge the needs of a community and its eligibility for assistance.

Other matters

The Committee encourages the Secretary to allow for national applications under the Community Facility Technical Assistance and Training Program without restrictions or award caps for funding under this paragraph from qualified national non-profit organizations for the sole purpose of providing on-site training and technical assistance on a national or multi-state regional basis.

The current regulatory cap on funding awards is not prescribed in the authorizing statute of the program, nor are such caps prescribed for the program on which the Committee modeled the CF Technical Assistance program, the Water and Waste Disposal Technical Assistance and Training Program (306(a)(14) of the CON Act.

The Committee intends that applications not be limited to $150,000 for national and multi-state non-profit applications, but rather be considered for an amount of no less than $500,000 to provide community facilities technical assistance and training on a national or multi-state basis.

The Committee is supportive of our cooperative entities in providing value and expertise to the agricultural community. The Committee notes that the Department of Commerce has begun including a question about cooperatives in the bi-decadal Economic Census performed by the U.S. Census Bureau. The Committee reminds the Secretary of the value of this data and encourages him to utilize it in the cooperative research program authorized in Section 310B(e)(10) of the CON Act.

Finally, the Committee notes with some concern the proliferation of economic development commissions, programs, authorities, and collaborations both in the CON Act and elsewhere in statute. It remains unclear what programs and authorities are currently utilized by the Department to improve economic development activities and what programs and authorities are no longer necessary, duplicative, or ill-suited to current use. To remedy this, the Committee requests the Department prepare a comprehensive report on USDA's Economic Development Authorities which:

1. Catalogues and describes USDA's statutory programs and authorities devoted to economic development, both current and lapsed;
2. Identifies each economic development office, agency, sub-agency, panel, committee, or other organizations created in statute or by regulation, and the decision-makers associated with each;
3. Enumerates all authorizations and appropriations, as well as number of staff which support each authority, program, and organization, from both federal and non-federal sources;
4. Provides a comprehensive description of how each program is utilized by the Department, any deficiencies, and overlap with other programs; and
5. Makes suggestions for reforming USDA's rural development authorities, including streamlining or sun-setting any unnecessary or duplicative programs and authorities; consolidating overlapping authorities; or establishing new authorities where there is a need.

Subtitle D—Rural Electrification Act

The Committee recognizes the important work that borrowers under the Rural Electrification Act perform in rural America. Rural telephone companies and cooperatives, electric cooperatives, and broadband providers work to connect all Americans to seamless telecommunications and energy networks.

In addition to the changes provided in Subtitle B, the Committee-reported bill makes several additional small changes to the REA to simplify compliance and promote continuity of services.

Section 6304 places the Rural Economic Development Loan and Grant (REDLG) Program on firmer financial footing. While the language in the bill significantly redrafts the underlying statute, the Committee's intent is that this statutory simplification does not alter the existing administration of the program. However, the reforms do intend to codify the two existing sources of funding for the program, as well as provide the appropriators with the authorization to appropriate additional funds to the program, if it should require.

Subtitle E—Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002

The Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 reauthorizes the successful energy programs that help diversify our nation's energy supply, promote energy efficiency, and create new economic opportunities in rural America. These programs promote the development of advanced biofuels and renewable energy.

In an effort to provide greater participation, the Rural Energy Savings Program has been amended to ensure that the Secretary does not include any other debt incurred in the calculation of a borrower's debt equity ratio for eligibility purposes as well as streamlining the accounting requirements on the borrowers while ensuring that there will be repayment of the loan. The Committee intends for the Secretary to continue to carry out section 6407 of the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002 (7 U.S.C. 8107) in the same manner as on the day before the date of enactment of this Act, except as amended under subsection (a), until such time as any regulations necessary to carry out the amendments made by this section are fully implemented.

To modernize the Biobased Markets Program, the Committee has reauthorized and amended the program by adding in no limitations on procurement of wood and wood-based products from any other federal agencies.

The Biorefinery, Renewable, Chemical, and Biobased Product Manufacturing Assistance has been amended to tailor the focus of the program to “renewable chemical or biobased product technology”.

The Repowering Assistance Program has been reauthorized, and the program has been authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000.

The Biorefinery Program for Advanced Biofuels is amended to require the Secretary to place limitations on the amount of feedstock payments one or more producers may receive in a year. The program also has been authorized to be appropriated $50,000,000.

The Committee bill has reauthorized and authorized to be appropriated $2,000,000 to the Biodiesel Fuel Education Program.

The Committee Bill has reauthorized the Rural Energy for America Program, Feedstock Flexibility, and the Biomass Crop Assistance Program with a specific authorization of $25,000,000.

Subtitle F—Miscellaneous

The Miscellaneous subtitle reauthorizes a number of existing USDA programs including the Value Added Producer Grants and regional economic and infrastructure development commissions.

Subtitle G—Program repeals

The Committee-reported bill repeals eleven obsolete programs.

Subtitle H—Technical corrections

The Committee-reported bill carries statutory corrections identified by the Office of Law Revision Counsel, staff, and others.

TITLE VII—RESEARCH, EXTENSION, AND RELATED MATTERS

The research title authorizes several intramural and extramural programs, providing resources and direction for foundational and basic agricultural research, extension, and education. This investment is the foundation for the success and viability of our nation’s agricultural industry as it strives to enhance productivity, improve consumers’ standard of living, and increase competitiveness of U.S. products in world markets.

National Agricultural Research, Extension, Education, and Economics Advisory Board

The National Agricultural Research, Extension, Education, and Economics Advisory Board (NAREEEAB) was created in 1996 to replace an existing stakeholder advisory board and consolidated the functions of numerous other boards, task forces, and counsels. This advisory board has since served as the principal advisory mechanism to the Secretary, Under Secretary, agency administrators, and the Congress on all aspects of the Research, Education, and Economics (REE) mission area.

In creating the NAREEEAB, Congress intended for this board to recommend policies, identify short- and long-term national priorities for REE programs, and to evaluate program results and effectiveness, among other assigned duties. Congress has since added multiple duties and consultative functions to the Board's mandate. In doing so, the Committee is aware that the workload and learning curve of the volunteer members is high. The Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 streamlines Board membership in order to allow flexibility for the Secretary in making appointments.

Previously, the Committee has encouraged the Secretary to consult with the NAREEEAB, in both the intramural research carried out by the Agricultural Research Service and in the competitive grants programs carried out through AFRI and other authorities, in carrying out and funding research. The Committee encourages USDA to utilize the expertise and input of the NAREEEAB to refocus and target limited agricultural research dollars on issues directly impacting production agriculture. The NAREEEAB should be asked to provide input in every step of the priority-setting process, and the Secretary is strongly encouraged to rely on this input in making final decisions.

Renewable Energy Committee discontinued

The Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 repeals the Renewable Energy Committee of the NAREEEAB. The Committee understands that this subcommittee was duplicative of the subcommittee established under the Biomass Research and Development Initiative (BRDI). The Committee encourages the Department to continue to utilize the BRDI subcommittee to fulfill the important role of studying the scope and effectiveness of research, extension, and economics programs affecting the renewable energy industry.

Centers for food security

The Committee encourages USDA to establish centers that focus on food security and the impact of food and agricultural policies on nutrition, trade, environment, and rural communities, both national and globally, at land-grant institutions.

The National Drought Mitigation Center

Drought can have a devastating impact on the food supply, food prices, farmer income, and the economic health of rural communities. Furthermore, drought impacts water supply and quality, energy production, fire threats, landscape changes, and tourism and recreation. At any one point in time, drought is likely to affect between a fourth and a third of the nation. Monitoring, preparedness, response, and resilience are proven means of managing the detrimental impacts of drought.

For many years, the weekly U.S. Drought Monitor has been the primary source of information on the extent and severity of drought throughout the U.S. In 2016–2017, the U.S. Drought Monitor, produced at the National Drought Mitigation Center was viewed over 15 million times on the NDMC website alone, and distributed even more widely through secondary sources. It is the most widely used gauge of drought conditions in the country. More recently, other important tools, such as the Drought Impact Reporter, drought mitigation plans and resilience guidelines or tools have been increasingly utilized. Furthermore, the U.S. Drought Monitor serves as a trigger for Federal disaster relief funds. The Committee expects that the U.S. Drought Monitor will continue to be the primary source of information on drought conditions in the U.S., and that additional tools for managing and mitigating drought will continue to be strengthened, made broadly available and applied at the local level.

Extension carryover at 1890 institutions

The Committee notes the deletion of the statutory maximum 20% carryover requirement. The Committee intends that USDA provide extension funding in a similar manner to both 1890s and 1862s.

Scholarships for students at 1890 institutions

The Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 authorizes scholarships at the 1890 land-grant institutions for students interested in food and agricultural sciences. The Committee acknowledges that there is currently an unmet demand for highly-skilled jobs within the agricultural industry. The 1890s have recognized the opportunity that such a gap presents for graduates with degrees in agricultural studies, and they are focusing efforts on generating greater interest in the agricultural programs within these institutions.

Land-grant designation

The Committee has strongly supported the continuing mission of our nations' land-grant university system to address local, State, and national priorities concerning food and agricultural sciences. Formula funds provided by USDA support capacity and infrastructure for research, education, and extension programs related to food and agricultural sciences.

The Committee is aware of recent efforts to designate a new 1862 land-grant institution to allocate Federal funds based on urban population. Funds allocated to States for agricultural research programs under the Hatch Act and agricultural extension programs pursuant to the Smith-Lever Act are based on individual formulas that take into account rural population and farm numbers. Urban population and State land area are not considered. The efficiencies gained through central administration of research, extension, and education programming within the States reduces costs while maximizing resources devoted to local, State, and national priorities. The Committee recognizes the budgetary limitations facing our nation requiring the land-grant system of colleges and universities, and all other public-sector entities, to do more with less.

Efforts to divide existing land-grant universities under the guise of local control of extension programming would establish separate, distinct administrative units with the effect of duplicating administrative costs and burdens, while significantly disrupting the ability to provide programming on high-priority local, State, and national issues.

The Committee addresses this concern by prohibiting USDA from providing capacity funding to institutions not previously designated as land-grant universities, thereby preserving the capability of the system to address our nation's priorities within the budgetary constraints that currently exist.

Genomes to phenomes

The Committee acknowledges the enormous challenge of efficiently and sustainably producing a safe, dependable food supply for a growing population. Meeting this challenge requires the development and management of crop varieties that will perform well despite increased weather variability. By improving the ability to predict crop performance in diverse environments, the genomes to phenomes initiative will enhance capability to develop new varieties, and to manage the effects of weather variability on crop productivity. The Committee therefore supports a large-scale, interdisciplinary network of researchers dedicated to producing and analyzing very large datasets of phenotypes to better predict crop yields.

While this genomes to phenomes initiative is focused on crops, it is the Committee's intent that this section not detract from existing projects, nor deter future research funding in animal genomics. The Committee recognizes the importance of animal genomics research conducted and supported by the Department. The Committee strongly supports increased efforts in genomics research on agriculturally important animals to address critical goals including: (1) understanding how environment and production systems impact the growth and productivity of livestock, poultry, and aquaculture to help predict and improve performance under variable conditions; (2) leveraging livestock, poultry, and aquaculture genomic information with phenotypic and environmental data to assist in selection of superior genetics and improved management; (3) understanding gene function in production environments to improve livestock, poultry, and aquaculture performance; and (4) developing improved data analytics to enhance understanding of the biological function of genome sequences in livestock, poultry, and aquaculture. The Committee commends the university community, the private-sector, and the Department for their work to advance animal genomics research and encourages additional focus on these efforts in the future.

High-priority research and extension initiatives

The Committee encourages USDA to more effectively coordinate intramural and extramural research activities that address the cattle fever tick. The fever tick has been a threat to American agriculture for generations causing enormous economic losses to the U.S. cattle industry in the late 1800s and early 1900s. These ticks are capable of carrying the protozoa, or microscopic parasites, Babesia bovis or B. bigemina, commonly known as cattle fever. The Babesia organism attacks and destroys red blood cells, causing acute anemia, high fever, and enlargement of the spleen and liver, ultimately resulting in death for up to 90 percent of susceptible cattle. Over 2,700 premises and 9 million acres in south Texas are currently under quarantine from cattle fever ticks, including many premises far north of the historic permanent quarantine zone along the Mexico border. If not controlled, they could spread to historic locations across the southern U.S. currently home to more than 400,000 cattle operations.

The Committee recognizes that it is in the economic interest of agricultural producers and American consumers to ensure a healthy, sustainable population of native and managed pollinators, including managed honey bees. Pollinators are essential to the production of an estimated one third of the human diet and to the reproduction of at least 80 percent of flowering plants. Insect-pollinated agricultural commodities result in significant income for agricultural producers and account for about $20 billion in U.S. agricultural output yearly. Because of the importance of pollinators in the production of the nation's food supply and their impact on the stability of our agricultural economy, and because the knowledge gap is too wide given the continuing seriousness of the problem, the Committee directs additional honeybee research to be coordinated USDA-wide, utilizing multi-year funding from SCRI, AFRI, and other existing funding sources to institute longitudinal field studies along major migratory bee routes, and to ensure adequate input from the beekeeper, specialty crop grower, and scientific community.

The Secretary should, through competitive awards, make funding available for research on the impact of Juniperus virginiana (eastern red cedar) on ranchlands and grasslands. Funding could be used for enhanced understanding of growth, development, and spread of the species; impact of eastern red cedar intrusion, including on beef production, water availability and fire danger; means of large-scale management and control of the species; and development of policies and practices for use by ranchers, State and local governments, and other relevant decision makers. Priority should be given to translational research on how to manage resilience and prevent losses of rangeland productivity, and technological and infrastructural solutions that address problems on a regional scale.

The Committee recognizes that Chronic Wasting Disease (CWD) is a serious issue impacting both wild and farmed cervid populations. The Secretary should, through competitive awards, make funding available for research as part of the Department's CWD management strategy.

Organic agriculture research and extension initiative

The Committee recognizes that consumer demand for organically produced goods continues to show double-digit growth, providing market incentives for U.S. farmers across a broad range of products. According to USDA, organic products are now available in nearly 20,000 natural food stores and nearly 3 out of 4 conventional grocery stores. Organic sales account for over 4 percent of total U.S. food sales. U.S. farms and ranches sold $7.6 billion in certified organic commodities in 2016, up 23 percent from $6.2 billion the year before. However, increases in domestic production have not been enough to keep up with increases in demand. To ensure adequate domestic supply, organic agriculture research must provide tools and resources American farmers and ranchers can use to take advantage of higher premiums and a robust organic market.

Farm business management

Farm business management activities as provided under section 1672D of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990 are defined as participation in farm business management associations and education programs that provide the participating farmers and ranchers a year-end whole farm and enterprise financial analysis. To be eligible for cost-share assistance under this program, participating farms or ranches must contribute their year-end financial data to the national farm financial database that has been awarded and designated by NIFA under section 1672D of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990. To ensure data confidentiality and security, all identifying characteristics other than county and State must be removed from individual farm or ranch data before being transmitted to the national farm financial database.

Specialty crop research initiative

The Committee is aware that the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine; Division on Earth and Life Studies; Board on Agriculture and Natural Resources recently completed a review of citrus greening research and development efforts. The report recommended continued support for both basic and applied research and both short- and long-term research efforts, but it noted a lack of standardized methods and parameters as well as a lack of strategic coordination. The Committee directs USDA to create opportunities for communication, collaboration, and innovation among researchers, representatives of other funding agencies, and the citrus industry to address the concerns highlighted in the Academies' report.

The Committee recognizes and supports efforts to increase domestic fruit and vegetable production from all growing methods. To further the goal of increased domestic production, the Committee encourages the Secretary to ensure that there is sufficient research to support the growth of this sector including: indoor growing, harvesting and packaging technologies, impacts of shipping and transportation on nutritional value, and energy efficiency among different growing methods.

Sun Grant Program

The Committee-reported bill directs the Secretary to utilize and leverage the investment, resources and capacities of the current regional Sun Grant Program Centers and Sub-center to continue their leadership and management of the regional Sun Grant competitive grants program.

Research Facilities Act

The Committee expects the Secretary to require in the application process a facilities management plan including long-term maintenance of the facility based on industry standards. The Committee expects the Secretary to give higher priority to those projects that have significant private support and multi-State contributions. In determining multi-State support, the Secretary should consider letters of support and/or funding from other State institutions and multi-State organizations and corporations. The Secretary should consider equally renovations and new construction without bias. Proposals should provide justification for renovation over new construction, or new construction over renovation, specific to the project. The Committee expects the Secretary to rank projects on criterion such as scientific merit, national and regional need, and other objective criteria; but not the size or cost of the project.

Competitive, Special, and Facilities Research Grant Act

AFRI is the premier competitive research and extension grants program within USDA. The AFRI program was established in 2008 as a successor program to the National Research Initiative Competitive Grants Program and the Initiative for Future Agriculture and Food Systems. The statutory priorities for AFRI are purposefully broad. In developing these priorities, Congress was aware that as science evolves, a balance needed to be achieved between the need for flexibility to respond to new and emerging threats and opportunities, and the need for transparency and accountability in the expenditure of taxpayer funds. The Committee urges the Secretary to work with stakeholders and the NAREEEAB to ensure that the allocation of research and extension awards under the AFRI program is consistent with our national priorities, as amended in the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018.

Additionally, the Committee notes that labor availability is the most critical challenge facing the specialty crop sector both in the short- and long-term. Committee hearings in Washington, and listening sessions around the country, have documented the need for additional mechanization research. The Committee therefore encourages the research agencies within USDA to more vigorously fund this vital research priority through their respective programs.

The Committee strongly urges USDA to use its authority under AFRI to award grants to institutions to support the design of one or more extension prototypes that propose leveraging digital platforms or other novel means of translating, delivering, or demonstrating agricultural research, to adapt, apply, translate, and/or demonstrate scientific findings, data, technology, and other research outcomes to farmers, industry, and other interested persons or organizations. These prototypes shall incorporate analytics and metrics to assess value and impact.

Beginning Farmer and Rancher Development Program

The Committee addresses stakeholder concerns by enhancing the Beginning Farmer and Rancher Development Program to allow the Department greater flexibility in administering the program to a more diverse pool of applicants. In addition, it allows flexibility in addressing more of the complex challenges that beginning farmers and ranchers face.

Biomass Research and Development Initiative

The purpose of the Biomass Research and Development Initiative (BRDI) is to promote research and development regarding the production of biofuels and biobased products. The Committee encourages the Department to prioritize and focus investment in projects which use pre-commercialization processes and methods to advance product development. The Committee is aware of numerous advanced manufacturing facilities around the country that can play an active part in the development phase of biofuels and biobased products, and urges the Secretary to encourage their involvement in BRDI projects.

Agency coordination

The Committee is concerned that the Department is not adequately coordinating implementation of research priorities between intramural and extramural research programs. While efforts to coordinate research across the agency have been well articulated in strategic documents, execution has been lacking. The Committee urges the Department to conduct stakeholder outreach, and to better coordinate with the NAREEEAB and the scientific community to ensure Federal research dollars are allocated in a strategic, effective way. In addition, the Committee directs USDA to utilize the priorities set out under AFRI to coordinate these efforts.

USDA, HHS, and multiple Federal agencies conduct important research on agriculture and food production, disease prevention, nutrition, and health. The Committee recognizes the value of inter-agency coordination in addressing how these issues impact public health. The Committee encourages USDA, HHS, and other relevant Federal agencies to maintain a Memorandum of Understanding to coordinate and share research findings on the future of nutrition research connecting agriculture production, food consumption, nutrition, and disease prevention.

University of the District of Columbia

In the 2008 Farm Bill, the matching funds requirement for Smith-Lever funding was eliminated for the University of the District of Columbia, thereby making UDC the only 1862 institution without a matching requirement. It is the Committee's intent to reinstate the matching funds requirement for UDC in order to affirm its status as an 1862 land-grant university, and to incentivize its important cooperative extension activities including improving food security in low-income communities, building viable agriculture businesses through hydroponics, aquaponics and vertical systems, creating agriculture jobs in high unemployment communities, and training the next generation of farmers.

Farmland Tenure, Transition, and Entry Data Initiative

The Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 includes a new Farmland Tenure, Transition, and Entry Data Initiative to ensure that the Committee and the public have access to important trend data on farmland ownership, tenure, transition, barriers to entry, profitability, and viability of beginning farmers. In carrying out this program, the Committee directs the Secretary to ensure that all personally identifiable information is protected. No data should be made publicly available if it can be used to distinguish or trace an individual's identity, either alone or when combined with other personal or identifying information that is linked, or linkable, to a specific individual.

Authority to transfer land at Beltsville Agricultural Research Center

The Committee is aware of the need to provide the Agricultural Research Service (ARS) with authority to transfer approximately 100 acres of land at the Henry A. Wallace Beltsville Agricultural Research Center in Beltsville, Maryland to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing (BEP). The Committee understands that the transfer will save USDA approximately $500,000 in operation and maintenance cost per year by reducing ARS' footprint by approximately 98,500 square feet. BEP will incur the cost of demolition of multiple ARS unutilized buildings. Future shared services between BEP and ARS could provide even more savings and efficiencies to both agencies.

Land-grant reporting requirements

The Committee is concerned with the increasing amount of reporting required by the National Institute of Food and Agriculture that is connected to the land-grant capacity funds, such as the combined plan of work. The perception remains that these reports often go unused, proving them unnecessary. In response to this notion, the land-grant community has created its own source, <https://landgrantimpacts.tamu.edu>, to document and showcase the research and extension impacts provided by the system. The changes made by section 7606 of the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 are intended to streamline the combined plan of work into a more concise and easier to prepare document. The professionals across the land-grant system should be spending their time and effort addressing the needs of American agriculture through discovery, and not filling out unnecessary paperwork.

In addition, the Committee is concerned that land-grant capacity funds are being treated similarly to competitive grants, in which an applicant proposes the use of such funds and is required to document compensation charges and personnel time and effort. Under current law, land-grant capacity funds are awarded based on a formula. The Department's role is to ensure that any required matching funds are provided and to disperse the funds as directed by law. In implementing section 7607 of the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018, the Department should issue updated guidance to affected institutions outlining the exemption.

Extension research

The Cooperative Extension System is a nationwide, non-formal educational network. Each State, territory, and the District of Columbia has an office at its land-grant universities, and a network of local or regional offices which are staffed by experts who provide practical, research-based education to agricultural producers, small business owners, youth, consumers, and others in rural and urban communities. The Committee encourages the Secretary to ensure that Cooperative Extension is effectively utilized to deliver the educational component of USDA programs. The Secretary is also encouraged to engage in discussions with other Federal departments and agencies to consider ways to use Cooperative Extension to deliver education for other Federal programs, as practicable.

In addition, the Committee recognizes the unique knowledge and information that the Cooperative Extension System experts provide to various groups regarding farm and food systems. As mentioned, this education and information is disseminated through a network of local or regional offices, and when the Secretary utilizes the Cooperative Extension to deliver the educational component of the various programs at the Department, to the extent practicable, the Rural Development mission area programs should be included.

Also, the Committee remains concerned about the agency's operation of the Federally Recognized Tribes Extension Program as if it were a 3(d) program. The Reservation Extension Agent Program was not authorized under Section 3(d) of the Smith-Lever Act. While this may have made administration of grants easier for the agency, it has led to confusion and unintended consequences. The Committee encourages the agency to follow Congressional intent when implementing programs, old and new.

Challenge of change

In order to meet the needs of the world's forecasted population of over 9 billion in 2050, global food production must be 60 percent higher than in 2014. While several Federal agencies and departments are involved in addressing food and nutrition security and the challenges of today and the future, the Committee is concerned that the integrated multi-disciplinary approach required to achieve the necessary levels of domestic and global food production and food and nutrition security does not currently exist. Therefore, the Committee encourages the Secretary to take a leadership role in working with other relevant departments and agencies in establishing a Federal interagency task force to meet the food and nutrition challenges of 2050. The Secretary, to the maximum extent practicable, should align domestic and global programs related to food production and food and nutrition security to meet these challenges.

Healthy Food Initiative

The Committee understands and strongly supports the need for a multidisciplinary approach and collaboration on research and education/outreach efforts across agricultural production, food, nutrition and health care systems to make a positive difference on human health and chronic disease. The Committee notes that recent reports, such as the Healthy Food Systems, Healthy People report of the Association of Public and Land-grant Universities' Board on Agriculture Assembly and Board on Human Sciences, identify multidisciplinary scientific approaches on human nutrition, food systems, and health as making an important contribution to alleviate skyrocketing healthcare costs, enhance economic productivity, and contribute to our nation's long-term national security. The Committee directs the Department to use all existing authority to work across Federal agencies with primary roles in agricultural production, food, nutrition, and health care systems, including the National Institutes of Health, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the National Science Foundation, and the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy. The Committee expects the Department to establish priorities and develop a cross-agency research program designed to catalyze multidisciplinary research in order to understand the characteristics, interactions, and challenges of agriculture, food, nutrition, and health care systems and how these systems can be better integrated to improve health outcomes. Further, the Committee intends for the Department to strengthen and expand the ability of Cooperative Extension professionals to help their patients, clients, and the public improve their health, and lessen the burden of chronic disease through the implementation and application of the multidisciplinary state-of-the-science agriculture, food, and nutrition research recommendations.

Invasive species

The Committee expects USDA to accelerate its efforts in the development of invasive species research initiatives, and to retrench efforts to work with individual States toward solutions to threats from those invasive species of plants and animals that have direct/indirect impacts, including economic impacts, on natural resource water supplies and domestic food sources. In carrying out this mission, the Committee expects the Department to coordinate invasive species research and outreach programs with land-grant institutions, through ARS and APHIS, so as to harness local and regional expertise. The Committee anticipates that the Department will support these initiatives from funds available through annual appropriations.

Methyl bromide alternatives outreach

Farmers throughout the country continue to face significant adverse economic and operational impacts associated with the phase out of methyl bromide, a critical crop protection tool. Therefore, continued education and outreach collaboration, including USDA's Methyl Bromide Alternatives Outreach efforts, are critical to allow researchers, Federal regulators, and impacted growers the ability to share research information and disseminate regulatory information in an effort to minimize the impacts of soil and post-harvest pests to agriculture and maintain critical domestic and international markets.

Auditing, reporting, bookkeeping, and administrative requirements

The Committee is concerned about the increasing use of assessments, fees, and higher indirect cost rates imposed on its university partners by the Agricultural Research Service (ARS). These university partners play a major role in achieving ARS research priorities and objectives. In a time of scarce budgetary resources, ARS must ensure limited research dollars are maximized and administrative costs are reduced to the fullest extent possible. In recent years, ARS has imposed a variety of administrative assessments on its university partners, effectively reducing funds intended for important research projects. The Committee expects ARS to operate within historical administrative cost parameters, namely by imposing a total indirect cost rate not exceeding four percent. All administrative assessments, fees, dues, or charges, of any type, must be included within this overall administrative cost cap. ARS must administer its programs more efficiently to ensure valuable research funds are maximized so it may continue to maintain a robust agricultural research enterprise. The Committee encourages ARS to continue university research partnerships to ensure our nation's premier educational and clinical institutions play a major role in achieving ARS and Congressional research objectives.

Food, energy, water nexus

The Committee expects the Secretary, in each of the three fiscal years following enactment of this legislation, to conduct a solicitation under the Innovations at the Nexus of Food, Energy, and Water Systems (INFEWS) Program. This solicitation should be consistent with previous solicitations released jointly by USDA and NSF and shall be at least at the same level.

National Food Safety Training, Education, Extension, Outreach, and Technical Assistance Competitive Grants Program

The Committee does not intend that removing the three-year limitation on funding under the National Food Safety Training, Education, Extension, Outreach, and Technical Assistance Competitive Grants Program (known as FSOP) limit the scope or reach of the program, and intends that NIFA ensure that a diversity of projects continue to be funded that represent a range of geographic regions and applicant types. The Committee recommends NIFA continue to ensure that representative community-based organizations are meaningfully integrated into any project that proposes to impact a particular community of producers.

TITLE VIII—FORESTRY

The Committee acknowledges that healthy and productive Federal, State, and private forests are an important part of many rural communities, and their proper management is vital for our environment and preventing catastrophic forest fires. The Committee believes that ensuring our forests are resilient should be a priority at the Department. Accordingly, the Committee-reported bill authorizes the necessary tools for the Department to improve active management on the nation's Federal, State, and private forests.

The Committee-reported bill acknowledges the importance of State and private forests and the work required to manage land, providing valuable habitat, clean air, recreation, and much more. Furthermore, the Committee recognizes the need to address forest health issues on a landscape scale, as private and public forests often intersect. Therefore, the Committee amends the Cooperative Forestry Assistance Act to authorize further cooperation between State Foresters to promote healthy forest management and wildfire mitigation. Cross-boundary management and hazardous fuels reduction projects will allow greater forest fire protection for those who live and work in our nation's forests, no matter the jurisdiction.

The Committee urges the USFS to place priority on those actions in the Forest Inventory and Analysis Strategic Plan, as authorized in the Agricultural Act of 2014, that provide continuity for long-standing historical data sets. As such, the Committee directs the USFS to annually prioritize funding and program implementation to ensure the elements of Strategic Plan "Option B" (full implementation of the 1998 Farm Bill's Strategic Plan) are maintained to include a specific focus on meeting the requirements of 20-percent annual plot re-measurement, annual Timber Products Output Program reporting, and implementing the National Woodland Owner Survey. The Committee also urges the USFS to continue to find efficiencies in program operations through the use of remote sensing technologies where appropriate, as well as partnering with States and other interested stakeholders to deliver the program.

The Committee recognizes the role private forests play in ensuring clean air, water, habitat, and the role that forest products play in the economy. The reported bill takes steps to ensure private landowners have the tools to help them make improvements to their property that benefit the landscape as a whole. The Forest Legacy Program and Community Forest and Open Space Conservation Program are intended to give USFS the tools to assist private forest owners along the way.

The Committee is concerned about the projected loss of private forestland in the United States, as detailed in the Resources Planning Act Assessment and regional analyses such as the Northern and Southern Forest Futures Reports, and associated loss of societal benefits such as clean air and water, wildlife habitat, jobs and forest products, and more. The Committee directs the Secretary, working through the Forest Resource Coordinating Committee, to develop a National Reforestation Initiative that addresses the threats to private forest retention. Within 24 months from the date of enactment of this Act, the Forest Resource Coordinating Committee should generate a strategic plan for the initiative to include relevant USDA programs that promote “Keeping Forests as Forests” and incentivize reforestation within priority areas identified in the Forest Service Resources Planning Act and Statewide Forest Resource Assessments and Strategies.

The Committee believes that strong rural infrastructure and market opportunities lead to healthy resilient communities and landscapes. The Committee-reported bill reauthorizes many authorities to allow the Secretary to promote new markets for wood products. The Committee encourages the Secretary of Agriculture to continue to support research and development to promote new markets for low-value timber. The new authorities in the Community Wood Energy and Wood Innovation Program should be used to incentivize private investment in infrastructure.

The Committee-reported bill addresses the declining health of America’s forest land managed by the USFS and the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) due to a lack of active management.

The most significant result of this diminished forest health is the significant increase in catastrophic wildfires in the past 15 years. The alarming increase in catastrophic wildfire impacts can be attributed to the decrease in timber production. From the mid-1950s to the mid-1990s, the USFS typically harvested between 10 and 12 billion board-feet annually. Since 1996, that number has declined to a range of 1.5 to 3.3 billion board-feet. During this same period, the average number of acres burned increased to 6.2 million acres.

The reason for the declining amount of timber production is twofold: longer planning periods that result in increased time and money and leave our forests vulnerable to insect and disease damage, and the effect of unnecessary litigation on forest planning decisions.

A 2012 USFS report estimated between 65 million and 82 million acres of forest land are facing some level of threat of wildfire and are in need of restoration; this is more than one-third of the National Forest System. In 2014, the USFS treated 2.9 million acres of land. At this pace, it would take the USFS more than 20 years to treat this endangered land.

During the 115th Congress, the Subcommittee on Conservation and Forestry held a hearing to review the management of the National Forest System. In the 114th Congress, Members heard testimony from former USFS Chief Tom Tidwell, as well as stakeholders representing the forestry, sportsmen, and conservation industries. The witnesses’ testimony highlighted the need for active forest management to address the challenges the USFS is facing.

The Committee-reported bill attempts to address the core issues facing the USFS: lengthy and costly planning processes to complete needed hazardous fuel reduction projects, and the threat of litigation forcing the USFS and BLM to take an overly cautious approach to forest management. The Committee-reported bill addresses these challenges by including categorical exclusions for processes that are routine and have known effects, allowing the agencies to perform forest management activities sooner to save time and taxpayer money; it rewards collaboration, giving all interest groups a seat at the table, and minimizes the threat of litigation of these collaborative projects.

The Committee-reported bill imposes no new requirements or burdens on the USFS or BLM. It expands upon the successes of the 2014 Farm Bill and the Healthy Forests Restoration Act. Further, the bill retains many environmental safeguards to ensure the respective land management agencies use these authorities in a reasonable and environmentally responsible manner.

TITLE IX—HORTICULTURE

Specialty crops—fruits, vegetables, tree nuts, and nursery plants—account for almost half of the domestic crop value in the United States. The Committee believes that the specialty crop industry can be best served through Federal and State efforts that help producers increase their respective competitive positions through marketing, promotion, and research programs. The Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 maintains and builds upon the popular and successful programs established in previous farm bills with this notion in mind.

National Organic Program

The Committee expects the National Organic Program (NOP) to take all steps necessary to ensure effective oversight, robust investigations, and fulsome enforcement of the organic regulations across the entire supply chain. This shall include (but is not limited to) limiting the importing operations excluded from certification under 205.101(b) of the Organic Foods Production Act of 1990; implementing requirements for modernized import documentation; establishing compliance working groups among parties to all organic equivalency arrangements; establishing joint compliance working groups among accredited certifying agents, State organic programs, and NOP; and expediting review of global certifying agents whose accreditation has been revoked by another country.

The Committee notes that the Organic Foods Production Act of 1990 grants accredited certifying agents the authority to require increased documentation before granting certification, especially when there is a specific area of concern. The Committee further notes that recent concerns regarding imported organic products are precisely the types of situations in which accredited certifying agents should exercise this authority.

Section 9006(b) requires the Secretary to establish procedures for expedited review by the National Organic Standards Board of materials considered for inclusion on the national list, if the material is a postharvest handling substance directly related to food safety. The provision is intended to address the speed with which the Board reviews such petitions, and the prioritization of such reviews, and is not intended to bypass any of the material review requirements established in the Organic Foods Production Act.

Section 9006(h) directs the Secretary to modernize international trade tracking and data collection systems of the NOP. In September 2017, the USDA Inspector General issued an audit report (01601-0001-21) evaluating the Agricultural Marketing Services' (AMS) controls over the approval and oversight of the NOP's agreements for international trade and import of organic products. The report found that to combat fraudulent imports of organic products, AMS needs to strengthen its controls over the approval and oversight of international trade arrangements and agreements for the import of organic products into the United States. In addition to strengthening internal controls, the NOP should be using the expertise of the trade professionals at the Foreign Agricultural Service and Customs and Border Protection and their foreign counterparts. In implementing this section, the Committee expects the Secretary to work with these agencies as well as the International Trade Commission to expand the list of Harmonized Tariff Schedule codes for organic products and direct Foreign Agricultural Service staff in overseas posts to identify irregular documentation or cargo movements of organic products.

Specialty Crop Block Grant Program

The bill makes several changes to the Specialty Crop Block Grant Program, which has been successful in enhancing the competitiveness of specialty crops by promoting increased consumption of fruits, vegetables, and nuts, fostering local and regional economic development, and enhancing research on specialty crops.

The Committee recognizes the difficulty in coordinating and funding multi-State projects within the block grant program, and the Committee expects USDA to issue guidance and work with States in making grants available for such projects. These multi-State projects may include food safety, research, plant pest and disease, and crop-specific projects. These projects have the ability to link growers across State lines and promote much needed collaborative research. In the Secretary's guidance, effective multi-State collaborative research should not limit needed equipment and facilities if it is found they are essential to research advancements.

To promote clarity at the time requests for grant proposals are posted, AMS should seek to post the Notice of Funding Availability earlier than the current timeframe of March of each year, if possible within budgetary time constraints. Recommendations for optimal timing of AMS's notice include December of the prior year or January of each grant year.

The Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act and Endangered Species Act consultations

FIFRA is a regulatory statute that governs the sale and use of pesticides in the United States through the registration and labeling of such products. Its objective is to protect human health and the environment from unreasonable adverse effects of pesticides, taking into account the costs and benefits of various product uses. Pesticides regulated under FIFRA include insecticides, herbicides, fungicides, rodenticides, and other designated substances. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) reviews scientific data submitted by chemical manufacturers on toxicity and behavior in the environment to evaluate risks and exposure associated with a product's use.

FIFRA prohibits the sale of any pesticide unless it is registered and labeled indicating approved uses and restrictions. It is a violation of Federal law to use such a chemical in a manner that is inconsistent with the label instructions. If a registration is granted, EPA makes a finding that the chemical "when used in accordance with widespread and commonly recognized practice it will not generally cause unreasonable adverse effects on the environment." (7 U.S.C. 136a(c)(5)(D).) EPA then specifies the approved uses and conditions of use of the pesticide, and this is required to be explained on the product label.

The Endangered Species Act (ESA) requires the Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Marine Fisheries Service (collectively, the Services) to consult with the EPA to assess the impact of an active ingredient on a threatened or endangered species and critical habitat. To obtain a pesticide registration, applicants must submit, and the EPA must review the conclusions of over 100 scientific tests on the pesticide's effects on the environment. The EPA evaluates potential effects of a pesticide on all non-target species, including endangered species, ensuring the proposed use does not cause "any unreasonable adverse effects on the environment", which includes fish, wildlife, and "non-target" plant species. Applicants for a pesticide registration must submit EPA-required scientific studies to the EPA allowing the Agency to conduct a thorough evaluation of the potential environmental impacts. The EPA also considers other available data and can require additional data to ensure its registration decisions are scientifically sound.

The changes made in the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 strengthen the EPA's pesticide registration process by incorporating the ESA's standard of protection for threatened or endangered species and critical habitat. The changes further require the EPA to request the Services' best available data on the location, life history, habitat needs, distribution, threats, population trends, and conservation needs of the species, and the relevant physical and biological features of designated critical habitat for the species. The Committee expects these changes to result in an improved and more efficient consultation process to make the best use of limited government resources and to increase transparency and public trust in the risk assessment processes.

The Clean Water Act

The objective of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (Clean Water Act or CWA) is to restore and maintain the chemical, physical, and biological integrity of the nation's waters. The primary mechanism for achieving this objective is the CWA's prohibition on the discharge of any pollutant without a National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permit. EPA has the authority to regulate the discharge of pollutants either through general permits or through individual permits. NPDES permits specify limits on what pollutants may be discharged from point sources and in what amounts. Under the CWA, 47 States and territories have been authorized to implement NPDES permits and enforce permits.

EPA manages the Clean Water Act program in the remaining States and territories.

NPDES permits are the basic regulatory tool of the CWA. EPA or an authorized State may issue compliance orders, or file civil suits against those who violate the terms of a permit. In addition, in the absence of Federal or State action, individuals may bring a citizen suit in United States district court against those who violate the terms of an NPDES permit, or against those who discharge without a valid permit.

Litigation

In over 30 years of administering the CWA, EPA had never required an NPDES permit for the application of a pesticide, when the pesticide was applied in a manner consistent with FIFRA and its regulations. While the CWA contains a provision granting citizen suits against those who violate permit conditions, or those who discharge without an NPDES permit, FIFRA has no citizen suit provision. As a result, beginning in the late 1990s, a series of citizen lawsuits were filed by parties, contending that an NPDES permit is necessary when applying a FIFRA-regulated product over, into, or near waterbodies. These cases generated several Court of Appeals decisions that created confusion and concern among pesticide users regarding the applicability of the CWA with regard to pesticide use.

As the litigation continued, concern and confusion grew among farmers, forest landowners, and public health officials, prompting EPA to issue interim, and later final, interpretive guidance in August 2003 and January 2005, and then to undertake a rulemaking to clarify and formalize the Agency's interpretation of the CWA as it applied to pesticide use. The EPA rule was finalized in November 2006 (71 Fed. Reg. 68483 (Nov. 27, 2006)), and was the culmination of a three year participatory rulemaking process that began with the interim interpretive statement in 2003 and involved two rounds of public comment.

The 2006 EPA rule codified EPA's long-standing interpretation that the application of chemical and biological pesticides for their intended purpose, and in compliance with pesticide label restrictions, is not a discharge of a 'pollutant' under the CWA, and therefore, that an NPDES permit is not required. The rule clearly defined specific circumstances in which the use of pesticides in accordance with all relevant requirements under FIFRA is not a CWA 'discharge of a pollutant,' explaining in detail the rationale for the Agency's interpretation.

When the rule was finalized, environmental groups, as well as farm and pesticide industry groups, filed petitions for review of the rule in several Federal Circuit Courts of Appeal. The petitions were consolidated in the Sixth Circuit. The Sixth Circuit ultimately vacated the rule on January 7, 2009 in National Cotton Council v. EPA (553 F.3d 927; hereinafter, National Cotton Council), concluding that the final rule was not a reasonable interpretation of the CWA's permitting requirements. The court rejected EPA's contention that, when pesticides are applied over, into, or near waterbodies to control pests, they are not considered pollutants as long as they comply with FIFRA, and held that NPDES permits are required for all pesticide applications that may leave a residue in water.

EPA estimated that the ruling would affect approximately 365,000 pesticide applicators that perform some 5.6 million pesticide applications annually. The court's decision, which would apply nationally, was to be effective seven days after the deadline for rehearing expired or seven days after a denial of any petition for rehearing. Parties had until April 9, 2009, to seek rehearing.

On April 9, 2009, the government chose not to seek rehearing in the National Cotton Council case. The government instead filed a motion to stay issuance of the court's mandate for two years to provide EPA time to develop an entirely new NPDES permitting process to cover pesticide use. As part of this, EPA needed to propose and issue a final NPDES general permit for pesticide applications, for States to develop permits, and for EPA to provide outreach and education to the regulated community. Industry groups filed a petition seeking en banc review, asking the full Sixth Circuit to reconsider the decision from the three-judge panel.

On June 8, 2009, the Sixth Circuit granted EPA a two-year stay of the court's mandate, in response to their earlier request. The Sixth Circuit denied the industry groups' petition for rehearing in August 2009. The court-ordered deadline for EPA to promulgate a new permitting process for pesticides under the Clean Water Act was April 9, 2011. On March 3, 2011, EPA filed another request for an extension with the court. On March 28, 2011, the Sixth Circuit granted an extension through October 31, 2011. The Court's extension only temporarily postponed the need for an NPDES permit for pesticide use, and did not obviate the need for this legislation.

Two petitions were filed with the U.S. Supreme Court in December 2009 by representatives of the agriculture community and the pesticide industry, requesting that the U.S. Supreme Court review the National Cotton Council case. A number of parties, including numerous Members of Congress, filed amicus briefs with the U.S. Supreme Court, in support of or opposition to the petitions. On February 22, 2010, the U.S. Supreme Court denied the petitioners' request without comment.

EPA development of a new permitting process to cover pesticide use

EPA continued to move ahead and developed a new NPDES permitting process to cover pesticide use, and on October 31, 2011, EPA issued a final NPDES Pesticide General Permit for point source discharges from the application of pesticides to waters of the United States. The permit covers four pesticide uses: (1) mosquito and other flying insect pest control; (2) aquatic weed and algae control; (3) aquatic nuisance animal control; and (4) forest canopy pest control. It does not cover terrestrial applications to control pests on agricultural crops or forest floors, and does not cover activities exempt from permitting under the CWA (irrigation return flow, agricultural stormwater runoff) and discharges that will require coverage under an individual permit, such as discharges of pesticides to waterbodies that are considered impaired under CWA Sec. 303(d) for that discharged pesticide. This general permit provides coverage for discharges in the states where EPA is the NPDES permitting authority. In the remaining States, the States are authorized to develop and issue the NPDES pesticide permits.

Implications

The Committee has received testimony and other information on the implications of the Sixth Circuit's holding in the National Cotton Council case, and the new permitting process that EPA has had to develop under the CWA as a result of that holding, on State and local agencies, mosquito control districts, water districts, pesticide applicators, agriculture, forest managers, and other stakeholders. On February 16, 2011, the Subcommittee on Water Resources and Environment of the House Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure held a joint hearing with the Nutrition and Horticulture Subcommittee of the House Committee on Agriculture to consider means for reducing the regulatory burdens posed by the National Cotton Council case and to consider related draft legislation.

Despite being limited to four categories of pesticide uses, EPA's new general permit for covered pesticides stands to be the single greatest expansion of the permitting process in the history of the NPDES program. EPA has estimated that it can expect approximately 5.6 million covered pesticide applications per year by approximately 365,000 applicators—virtually doubling the number of entities currently subject to NPDES permitting. (U.S. EPA, Fact Sheet for 2010 Public Notice of: Draft National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) Pesticides General Permit (PGP) for Discharges from the Application of Pesticides to or over, including near Waters of the U.S., at 14, available at http://www.epa.gov/npdes/pubs/proposed_pgp_fs.pdf.)

With this unprecedented expansion comes real and tangible burdens for EPA and the States that will have to issue the permits, those whose livelihoods depend on the use of pesticides, and even everyday citizens going about their daily lives. EPA has said that they will be able to conform the current process to meet the Sixth Circuit's mandate. Even so, much of the responsibility of developing and issuing general permits falls on the States. Forty-five States (and the U.S. Virgin Islands) are now facing increased financial and administrative burdens in order to comply with the new permitting process. In a time when too many States are being forced to make difficult budgetary cuts, the nation cannot afford to impose more financial burdens.

The expanded permitting process also imposes enormous burdens on pesticide users who encompass a wide range of individuals from State agencies, city and county municipalities, mosquito control districts, water districts, pesticide applicators, farmers, ranchers, forest managers, scientists, and others. The new and duplicative permitting process is increasing both the administrative difficulty and costs for pesticide applicators to come into compliance with the law. Compliance no longer means simply following instructions on a pesticide label. Instead, applicators have to navigate a complex process of identifying the relevant permit, filing with the regulatory authority a valid notice of intent to comply with the permit, and having a familiarity with all of the permit's conditions and restrictions. Along with increased administrative burdens comes an increased monetary burden. Estimates are that the cost associated with the EPA permit scheme to small businesses could be as high as $50,000 per business, annually.

In addition to the costs of coming into compliance, pesticide users are subject to an increased risk of litigation and exorbitant fines. Applicators not in compliance face fines of up to $37,500 per day per violation, not including attorney's fees. Given the fact that a large number of applicators have never been subject to NPDES and its permitting process, even a good faith effort to be in compliance could fall short. Moreover, the CWA allows for private actions against individuals who may or may not have committed a violation. Thus, while EPA may exercise its judgment and refrain from prosecuting certain applicators, they remain vulnerable to citizen suits. Unless Congress acts, hundreds of thousands of farmers, foresters, and public health pesticide users will remain under the constant threat of lawsuits.

It is not only pesticide regulators and applicators who are being affected by this permitting requirement. Rather, the Sixth Circuit's decision is affecting everyday citizens, who rely on the benefits provided by pesticides and their responsible application. Pesticide use is an essential part of agriculture. Imposing a burdensome and duplicative permitting process on our nation's farmers threatens their ability to continue to provide the country with a safe and reliable food supply. Many family farmers and small applicators lack the resources to ensure compliance with a cumbersome and detailed permit scheme. Moreover, for those farmers who are able to comply, delays that are inherent in permitting schemes are ill-suited for prompt pest control actions necessary in agriculture. Failure to apply a pesticide soon after a pest is first detected could result in recurring and greater pest damage in subsequent years if a prolific insect were to become established in plant hosts. Former Secretary of Agriculture, Hon. Thomas J. Vilsack, said that a permitting system under the CWA for pesticide use "is ill-suited to the demands of agricultural production." (Letter, Hon. Thomas J. Vilsack, Secretary of Agriculture, to Hon. Lisa P. Jackson, Administrator, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Subject: The National Cotton Council of America, et al., v. United States Environmental Protection Agency (Mar. 6, 2009)).

Forest landowners also stand to suffer under this permit scheme. EPA's permit scheme stands to result in a reduction in the use of forest pest control as a forest management tool, resulting in the acceleration of tree mortality and general decline in overall forest health. It also is erecting barriers for the control of pests, such as Gypsy Moth and Forest Tent Caterpillar. This may result in a higher incidence of preventable tree kills and defoliated landscapes.

Finally, the Sixth Circuit's holding could have significant implications for public health. The National Centers for Disease Control officially recognizes the following as a partial list of mosquito-borne diseases—Eastern Equine Encephalitis, Japanese Encephalitis, La Crosse Encephalitis, St. Louis Encephalitis, West Nile Virus, Western Equine Encephalitis, Dengue Fever, Malaria, Rift Valley Fever, and Yellow Fever. (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, http://www.cdc.gov/ncidod/diseases/list_mosquitoborne.htm.) EPA's permit program poses the possibility of critical delays in emergency responses to insect and disease outbreaks, and stands to divert resources from controlling environmental pests to litigation and administrative burdens.

Development of legislation in response to the Sixth Circuit decision

As a result of concerns raised by Federal, State, local, and private stakeholders regarding the interrelationship between FIFRA and the CWA and the concerns posed by the new and duplicative permitting process under the CWA, the House Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and House Committee on Agriculture sought technical assistance from EPA to draft very narrow legislation targeted only at addressing the Sixth Circuit's holding in National Cotton Council and return the state of pesticide regulation to the status quo—before the courts got involved. The provisions of the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 are based on the technical assistance that EPA provided to the Committees, and is intended to be consistent with EPA's final rule from November 2006. The bill amends FIFRA and the CWA to eliminate the requirement of an NPDES permit for applications of pesticides authorized for sale, distribution, or use under FIFRA.

ARS Aerial Application Technology Program

The Committee also recognizes the importance of the aerial application of pest control tools. These tools are useful not only to ensure overall food safety and food security, but also to promote public health through improved mosquito control techniques. The ARS Aerial Application Technology Program conducts innovative research making aerial applications more efficient, effective, and precise. This program has yielded more effective public health control programs, as well as increased efficiencies and greater crop production. Research for aerial application serves the public interest as a vital tool for the future.

Beneficial insects

Beneficial insects are an important and sustainable component of integrated pest management (IPM). Biological control is the practice of releasing natural enemies (predators and parasites) that seek out crop-destroying insects and mites. These natural predators, which are farm- or laboratory-reared in accordance with strict quality control standards, are safe to humans and do not harm the environment. Biological control is an important component of organic and conventional IPM and resistance management programs.

The Committee believes that the importation of farm-reared beneficial insects, mites and nematodes, which are native or established in the United States, and which have been continuously produced in controlled industrial settings for many generations, are appropriately regulated by the Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service import permits (PPQ 526). Consistent with Federal Regulation 50 CFR 14.4, which exempts farm-raised insects from the definition of wildlife, these beneficial insects, mites and nematodes shall not require a Declaration for the Importation or Exportation of Wildlife from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS). USFWS permits and inspections are costly, duplicative and do not provide any additional environmental protections. Further, the duplicative permits cause clearance delays that result in the loss of a highly perishable product.

TITLE X—CROP INSURANCE

Farmers and ranchers borrow more money each year to produce a crop than most Americans will borrow in a lifetime and this investment is extremely risky. As a consequence, producers not only depend on Federal Crop Insurance to survive a natural disaster, but also to secure operating loans from lenders who would not extend credit without something as basic as insurance. Most, if not all, farmers and ranchers would prefer to be able to purchase crop insurance in the same way they buy property and casualty insurance, but this is not an option. As the most frequent critics of Federal Crop Insurance have confessed, an actuarially viable crop insurance policy would be cost prohibitive due to the high risks involved in agriculture.

Thus, Congress reached a fork in the road between providing costly, unbudgeted, government-run ad hoc relief which producers would receive free of cost but also could not count on, or cost-effective, fully-budgeted Federal Crop Insurance that producers could purchase and build into their risk management strategies. Beginning in 1980, Congress began working to make the second approach a reality.

Today, Federal Crop Insurance covers 290 million acres, or 90 percent of all U.S. planted acres, insuring approximately 130 commodities produced nationwide, with more than $100 billion in liability protection in force. Farmer participation has roughly doubled over the past 18 years and liability protection in force has nearly tripled. Meanwhile, loss ratios are low. In 2016, the loss ratio was 0.42, meaning for every dollar of premium paid in, indemnities paid out equaled 42 cents. Additionally, the improper payment rate is less than half the government-wide average, standing at a mere 1.96 percent. Moreover, $17 billion in taxpayer savings have been achieved through cuts to Federal Crop Insurance since 2008, including a more than 30 percent cut to administrative and operating expense reimbursement used to pay the agent workforce and adjustors whose workload was sharply increasing. These cuts to the private sector have resulted in significant consolidation among both Approved Insurance Providers and agencies, with a number of high profile Approved Insurance Providers exiting the industry.

The 2014 Farm Bill made significant cuts to the Commodity Title and new investments in Federal Crop Insurance, reflecting a policy shift toward risk management. When the 2014 Farm Bill passed, Federal Crop Insurance costs were expected to increase by $5.7 billion over 10 years. However, crop insurance has instead cost $10 billion less than estimated and is projected to save an additional $10 billion over the next 10 years. Thus, the actual costs of crop insurance in 2016 and 2017 approximate costs of a decade ago. Considerable thanks is owed to farmers and ranchers themselves who pay total premiums as high as $4.5 billion each year for the peace of mind crop insurance provides.

However, the significant taxpayer savings resulting from Federal Crop Insurance is understated because it does not capture savings resulting from crop insurance having largely obviated ad hoc disaster bills, although some relief for agriculture was recently included in an overall response to the record losses sustained due to hurricanes and wildfires occurring in 2017. For instance, had Congress approved the same ad hoc disaster program for the 2012 drought as was approved for the 1988 drought, which caused comparable losses, the cost would have exceeded $17 billion.

The successes of Federal Crop Insurance were not achieved overnight and are, in fact, an ongoing process. However, Federal Crop Insurance owes much of its success to key events of the past 38 years, beginning with the establishment of the current private-public partnership under which private companies and agents write, service, and adjust policies for farmer and rancher customers. The availability of revenue policies and the increase in premium support under the Agricultural Risk Protection Act of 2000, are two other essential elements to the success of crop insurance. It comes as no surprise then that, without exception, the proposals to “reform” Federal Crop Insurance take aim at these key components, presumably with the objective of returning Federal Crop Insurance to its ineffectual state prior to 1980.

At the 114 hearings and 6 listening sessions in the field conducted by the Committee over the course of the past three years, the most common refrain the Committee heard was that Washington “do no harm” to crop insurance. The Committee listened. The farm bill makes targeted improvements to Federal Crop Insurance while maintaining the success of this private-public partnership that America’s farm and ranch families rely on to weather what Mother Nature throws at them.

The changes to Federal Crop Insurance provided under the farm bill include strengthening research and development, including the maintenance fee structure to foster private sector innovation in meeting the risk management needs of farmers and ranchers. The Committee believes communication between private developers of policies and Approved Insurance Providers is critical to ensure new policies are being developed that address unmet needs and that maintenance fees are set at levels that do not inhibit availability or participation.

The Committee is particularly concerned that some crops and growing regions affected by the 2017 hurricanes were unserved or underserved by Federal Crop Insurance and expects the Secretary, acting through the Risk Management Agency (RMA), to use the expansive legal authorities Congress has granted to ensure that these crops and regions are provided access to affordable, high quality coverage through risk management products that effectively mitigate the perils unique to them. The Committee observes that section 508(h)(2), among other authorities, provides significant latitude in addressing these needs. The Committee is also concerned that premium rates on grain sorghum may be set too high given loss experience and expects the Secretary, acting through RMA, to study the matter, report to the Committee with its findings, and take steps to remedy premium rates if they are found to be inappropriately high. The Committee also expects the Secretary, acting through RMA, to treat a crop that can be grazed and also subsequently harvested for grain as two separate crops, making two separate insurance policies available for purchase. The Committee does not intend for total indemnities on the two policies to exceed the total value of the crop, taking into account the value to the producer of the crop when both grazed and harvested. The Committee further expects the Secretary, acting through RMA, to continue to treat legitimate alternate wetting and drying practices in rice production as acceptable practices under the current basic policy provisions as the agency works with industry, academia, and the private sector to amend the basic provisions to accommodate such technology advances, or develop policy endorsements relating to these or similar practices.

The Committee clarifies that the current Federal Crop Insurance Act authorizes RMA to employ a 10 percent cap when determining the Actual Production History (APH) of a producer and that other authorities are also available to RMA in mitigating the impacts of natural disasters on the APH of producers, including but not limited to the yield adjustment authority under section 508(g)(4)(B), the yield exclusion authority under section 508(g)(4)(C), and the trend yield adjustment under section 508(h). The Committee does not expect RMA to alter the availability or design of these adjustments and observes that section 508(h)(2) provides significant latitude in this regard.

The Committee also includes provisions to avoid any duplication of benefit between Federal Crop Insurance and the Commodity Title's Agricultural Risk Coverage, updates fees for catastrophic loss coverage, and repeals unused authorities. The Committee expects the Secretary, acting through RMA, to make written agreements more accessible to farmers, ensuring regional offices use a more uniform approach to written agreements while easing the administrative burden on farmers needing written agreements in order to obtain coverage. The Committee is aware that there are farmers who produce a crop in a county under a written agreement and if they seek to produce the same crop in another county the producer must have three years of records. The Committee would observe that this requirement can be unnecessarily prescriptive and has injured producers suffering crop losses due to natural disasters.

The Committee urges the Secretary, acting through RMA, to continue making improvements to the Whole Farm Revenue Program (WFRP) to help diverse producers manage their risks. The Committee notes that there is great potential to expand access to crop insurance to producers through the continued improvement of WFRP and expects RMA to evaluate barriers to access to WFRP and work to streamline and reduce these barriers. Specifically, the Committee urges the elimination of limits that disqualify farmers with expected revenues in excess of certain amounts from livestock, nursery, or greenhouses. In addition, the Committee is concerned that many producers are unable to utilize WFRP due to the overall limit on insured revenue. The Committee urges the Secretary, acting through RMA, to provide options under WFRP that would provide risk management protection for producers whose insured revenue is greater than the current limits. Moreover, with the recent elimination of the cap on livestock under Federal Crop Insurance, the Committee observes that the internal cap within WFRP that limits the value of livestock that can be insured is inconsistent and outdated. The Committee expects the Secretary, acting through RMA, to make improvements, including with the help of the private sector, to current insurance policies and to continue to expand and develop options that would provide risk management tools for livestock producers. The Committee further observes the lack of availability of crop insurance for much of aquaculture. Multiple feasibility studies have been conducted, but have not resulted in a widely available policy for aquaculture farmers. The Committee expects the Secretary, acting through RMA, to specifically identify barriers to participation in WFRP for aquaculture producers. Moreover, the Committee urges RMA to consider treating the different growth stages of aquatic livestock as separate crops to take into account the different perils at different phases of development and the provision of enhanced premium support provided for diversified producers. The Committee also notes that WFRP is a less effective risk management tool the years following significant losses due to a reduction in the five-year income history of the producer. Additionally, while indemnities from insurance policies or the non-insured crop assistance program count as revenue received by producers in the year of the loss, they do not factor in as Revenue to Count for the revenue guarantee going forward, further undermining available WFRP coverage in successive loss years. The Committee expects the Secretary, acting through RMA, to find ways to improve the effectiveness of WFRP so that producers have an effective risk management tool following losses. The Committee further notes that RMA has taken significant steps to improve crop insurance for organic producers (and those transitioning to organic production). The Committee urges the availability of options that ensure that producers enrolled in WFRP who transition from conventional to organic production have insurance coverage representative of their organic income potential.

The Committee would note the popularity and expansion of index-based weather insurance products like Pasture, Range, and Forage (PRF) and Annual Forage (AF). However, with the increased participation in many remote areas of the country, the Committee has concerns about the integrity of the data used to administer the program in areas with a lower density of rainfall data collection sites. Many producers in these areas believe the data reported by the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) may not be representative of the actual rainfall received. The Committee expects the Secretary, acting through RMA, to evaluate the coverage of NOAA weather stations in remote areas and consider alternative data collection methods to supplement where NOAA rainfall data may be lacking.

Moreover, the Committee appreciates efforts by the Administration to streamline common functions across agencies within the Food Production and Conservation (FPAC) mission area by achieving efficiencies through the consolidation of these functions within the FPAC Business Center. However, the Committee expects that staff who fulfill a role that is unique to an agency not be transferred to the Business Center and instead remain located within his or her respective agency.

The Committee notes that Enterprise Units (EU) are an important option for producers and encourages the Secretary, acting through RMA, to permit producers that farm minimal acreage in a county that is ineligible for EU to be combined with EU-eligible acreage in an adjacent county in order to form a single EU.

The Committee would note the disparate treatment of different varieties of potatoes and believes fresh market coverage should be expanded to include additional varieties and that further efforts should be made to collect sufficient data on specialty variety potatoes so that additional coverage options can be made available to producers. In addition, while the Committee acknowledges the need for RMA to charge a higher interest rate relative to the late payment of premiums to encourage repayment, the Committee urges the Secretary, acting through RMA, to consider whether a 15 percent annual interest rate is exorbitant. Given the significant exits of Approved Insurance Providers, the budget neutrality requirements in law, and the ongoing and severe agriculture recession, the Committee expects the Secretary to forego any action pursuant to section 508(k)(8)(A)(ii). The Committee expects the Secretary, acting through RMA, to protect the integrity of crop insurance through the prevention of tying which is not permitted under the Federal Crop Insurance Act. The Committee notes that the 2014 Farm Bill included a sensible provision to allow agents an opportunity to correct errors. However, the provision has not been implemented in a manner that permits the reasonable correction of errors. The Committee expects that the Secretary, acting through RMA, will address this as part of the Secretary's vision for improving customer service. The Committee commends RMA's May 2016 interpretation of entity for purposes of 7 U.S.C. 1508(a)(9)(B) as wholly consistent with Congressional intent and a plain reading of the statute and vital to maintaining the integrity of crop insurance.

TITLE XI—MISCELLANEOUS

SUBTITLE A—LIVESTOCK

The Committee understands that although accounting for only 5% of GDP, food safety and food access affects 100% of the population. Animal agriculture is no exception and faces disease threats capable of devastating the rural economy and our nation's food supply as was made abundantly clear in recent years with the devastating outbreaks of PEDv and HPAI. As such, the Committee strives to ensure USDA and its partners have the tools necessary to prevent and respond to animal pests and diseases that pose a threat to the U.S. economy and food security.

More specifically, the Committee believes it is essential that USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), State animal health officials, and stakeholders involved in animal agriculture have: (1) early detection, prevention, and rapid response tools to address any potential animal disease outbreak; (2) robust laboratory capacity for surveillance; and (3) a viable stockpile of vaccine to rapidly respond to the intentional or unintentional introduction of a high-consequence disease like FMD.

In response, the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 reauthorizes and funds the National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN), and establishes and funds the National Animal Disease Preparedness and Response Program as well as the National Animal Health Vaccine Bank.

The Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 provides mandatory funding of $250 million for these programs in Fiscal Year 2019 (to remain available until expended), with $30 million allocated to the enhancement of the NAHLN, $70 million allocated to establishment of the National Animal Disease Preparedness and Response Program, and $150 million allocated for the establishment of a U.S.-only vaccine bank with a priority for stockpiling FMD vaccine. The bill provides $50 million of mandatory funding for Fiscal Years 2020 through 2023 with $30 million set aside for the National Animal Disease Preparedness and Response Program, and the remainder to be used at the Secretary's discretion amongst the three components. The Committee is confident that the Secretary and his team of experts are best positioned to determine the highest priority use of such remaining funds based on current and forecasted needs.

National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN)

Vigilant surveillance of animal disease is a key first step in preventing and containing an outbreak. As such, the Committee recognizes the NAHLN as the first line of defense in animal disease prevention and testing. This role was put to the test during the 2015 HPAI outbreaks as thousands of samples were rapidly tested to ensure depopulation of infected flocks in a timely manner. The NAHLN was also instrumental in performing surveillance of surrounding areas to mitigate further spread of the disease, and in testing premises to determine freedom of disease prior to repopulation. The Committee intends to build on this success by providing mandatory funding to enhance the capacity of NAHLN, particularly through the development and approval of novel and expedited diagnostic testing methods.

National Animal Disease Preparedness and Response Program

Recent outbreaks of animal disease have demonstrated the importance of a robust, forward-looking animal health program and the need for a coordinated effort between Federal, State, and local partners. The Committee intends to help bridge this gap by establishing and funding the National Animal Disease Preparedness and Response Program modeled after the highly successful Plant Pest and Disease Management and Disaster Prevention Program. The Committee expects the Secretary to enter into multiple cooperative agreements with a variety of eligible entities including State Departments of Agriculture and agricultural colleges and universities to address both wide-spread and localized animal pest and disease threats. Such efforts should include the development and implementation of biosecurity measures such as continuity of business and secure food supply plans.

Foot and Mouth Disease Vaccine Bank

FMD is a highly contagious, viral disease that affects livestock species, including cows, pigs, sheep, and goats. Although the last U.S. outbreak was in 1929, FMD still circulates throughout the world, posing a threat to the United States.

In 2018, the USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service estimated there were more than 167 million cattle and swine, and almost 8 million sheep and goats in the United States. Given the current limited stock of viral antigen concentrate in the shared North American Vaccine Bank, APHIS would only be able to provide vaccine doses for 1.5% of susceptible U.S. livestock, assuming only a single inoculation for each animal.

To enhance APHIS's ability to respond to the potential introduction of FMD, the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 establishes and funds a U.S.-only vaccine bank with priority for the procurement of FMD vaccine. Vaccine from the bank should be used to support APHIS's current vaccination strategy if faced with an outbreak of FMD and used in tandem with stockpiles available to the U.S. through the North American Vaccine Bank.

The Committee encourages the Secretary to carefully consider all options for stockpiling vaccine and expects resources provided to be used on the optimal complement of products to address the highest risk FMD strains including products capable of differentiating infected animals from those that have been vaccinated. In considering stockpiling options, the Committee expects the Secretary to review the procurement process to identify potential efficiencies and improvements, particularly any needed changes to allow for maximum contract flexibility and product innovation over time. The Committee views such efficiencies as vital to the long-term sustainability of the bank.

While the Committee expects the funding provided in the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 to sufficiently establish and maintain an initial supply of FMD-vaccine and related products, the Committee understands that greater investment may be desired and warranted in later years. The Committee encourages the Secretary and interested stakeholders to work together to identify alternative funding sources to achieve such investment.

Animal disease traceability

The Committee acknowledges that traceability is achieved under the USDA-APHIS Animal Disease Traceability (ADT) Program. The Committee requests that APHIS share with the Committee action items to be completed by the agency based on stakeholder issues identified in the 2017 ADT public listening sessions, as well as corrections for operational deficiencies and gaps in trace performance measures (TPM) as reported in the April 2017 ADT performance assessment related to Phase 1 of the program, prior to moving ahead to initiate Phase 2.

Agrodefense budget review

The Committee recommends that the Secretary work with the Office of Management and Budget and the Secretary of Homeland Security to develop a crosscutting agrodefense budget analysis to provide a better understanding of current funding levels for all agrodefense-related activities. Such an effort would allow agency officials, Congress, and interested stakeholders to make more informed decisions, and better prioritize resources in ensuring the safety of the U.S. food supply.

SUBTITLE B—BEGINNING, SOCIALLY DISADVANTAGED, AND VETERAN PRODUCERS

The Committee-reported bill works to ensure that the needs and concerns of beginning, socially-disadvantaged, and veteran farmers and ranchers are adequately addressed. The Committee appreciates the Secretary's initiative to enhance customer service, and with that in mind, the Committee intends for the Department to ensure properly trained staff are available to this particular group of stakeholders. This will ensure those initiatives are prioritized by all USDA staff at all levels. The Committee intends for the Secretary to lead this effort in coordination with the State offices of the Farm Service Agency, the Natural Resources Conservation Service, the Risk Management Agency, the Rural Business-Cooperative Service, and the Rural Utilities Service to ensure appropriate information and technical assistance is available through outreach events and activities.

The Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 establishes the “Commission on Farm Transitions—Needs for 2050” to address needs relative to maintaining and strengthening a vital farm sector for the future. Ensuring the next generation of farmers and ranchers are in place to meet that need is a key concern of the Committee.

SUBTITLE C—TEXTILES

The Committee intends to streamline programs that are designed to reduce injury to domestic manufacturers of certain cotton and wool products as a result of disparate treatment under trade agreements. The Committee expects the Textile Trust Fund to continue to carry out the functions of the Pima Cotton Trust Fund, Wool Apparel Manufacturers Trust Fund, Wool Research and Promotion Grants Funding, and the Sheep Improvement Center in the same manner as current law at adjusted funding levels.

SUBTITLE D—UNITED STATES GRAIN STANDARDS ACT

The Committee remains concerned with the Department’s implementation of the U.S. Grain Standards Act provisions that provided for a “written agreement” exception program, which replaced the former “non-use of service” exception program. FGIS Directive 9290.18 created uncertainty for grain handling facilities. The Committee expects the Department to issue an updated directive noting the restored exceptions. In the event that any party to a previous agreement was sold and is now a different entity since an exception was terminated, the Committee expects that an exception could be reinstated as requested.

SUBTITLE E—NONINSURED CROP DISASTER ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

The Committee notes that the Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP) has served as an effective risk management tool for crops for which crop insurance is not available. However, when NAP was established, only individual yield policies were available through crop insurance. Currently, through subsequent farm bills, initiatives undertaken by the Risk Management Agency (RMA), and through the 508(h) private submission process, there is now a variety of other insurance options available. The Committee intends to clarify the insurance policy type and coverage availability that would result in a crop being ineligible for NAP coverage. NAP is intended to remain available until an individual yield or revenue insurance policy is offered for the crop at both the catastrophic and buy-up coverage levels. Weather-based index products and insurance for whole farm revenue should not impact NAP availability.

The Committee recognizes the efforts undertaken by FSA to maintain the integrity of NAP, but is concerned with a few isolated incidents where fraudulent activity has been discovered. This runs the risk of undermining the intention, purpose, and future availability of NAP coverage. The Committee expects FSA to vigilantly enforce the rules and regulations associated with NAP to maintain the integrity of the program. Additional effort should be made to identify and analyze aberrant large claims, or repetitive notices of loss filed by the same producer. The Committee would note the success of data mining efforts undertaken by RMA in identifying improper payments and would encourage FSA to explore all analytical options available to enhance oversight of NAP, and to ensure that applicable penalties are appropriate and provide an adequate deterrent to potential violations.

SUBTITLE F—OTHER MATTERS

The Committee supports the Secretary in the reorganization of the Department and, to that end, has included updates to the statutory references to the relevant Under Secretary positions and provided the Secretary the authority to carry out changes under the Department of Agriculture Reorganization Act of 1994.

Section 1117(b) defines actual crop revenue.

Section 1117(c) sets the agriculture risk coverage guarantee for a crop year for a covered commodity to 86 percent of the benchmark revenue. Further, this subsection defines benchmark revenue, requires that the Secretary use 70 percent of the transitional yield for yields in any of the five most recent crop years that is less than 70 percent, and requires the Secretary use the effective reference price where the national average market price for any of the five most recent crop years is lower than the effective reference price.

Section 1117(d) defines the payment rate.

Sec. 1118. Producer agreements

Section 1118(a) continues the Secretary's authority to require producers agree to comply with certain provisions in exchange for receiving payments, to issue rules to ensure compliance, and to modify compliance requirements.

In addition subsection (b) provides for a step up in acres of grassland contracts in increments of 500,000 to at least 3 million acres by 2023. The provision reserves unused grassland acres solely for grassland enrollment. The subsection also requires the Secretary to maintain the distribution of enrolled acres across the states in proportion to the historic state enrollment in the program and requires general signups to be held at least every other year.

Subsection (c) amends section 1231(e) of the Food Security Act of 1985 to set a duration range for general contracts for 10–15 years and continuous signup practices at either 15 years or 30 years.

Subsection (e) amends section 1231B(f) of the Food Security Act of 1985 to remove authority for incentive payments for farmable wetlands.

Sec. 2203. Duties of owners and operators

Subsection (a) amends section 1232(a) of the Food Security Act of 1985 to allow grazing for limited purpose of management as required by contract and specifically to direct the Secretary to include thinning and other practices, limited to management purposes, that improve the condition of the resources, promote forest management, and enhance wildlife habitat on land devoted to trees.

Subsection (b) amends section 1232(b)(2) of the Food Security Act of 1985 to create flexibility for some commercial use of enrolled lands.

Sec. 2204. Duties of the Secretary

Subsection (a) amends section 1233(a) of the Food Security Act of 1985 to establish a cross reference to the subsection for determining annual rental payment rates for the contract.

Subsection (b) amends section 1233(b) of the Food Security Act of 1985 to expand the opportunities for owners and operators to use haying, grazing, and other management tools on conservation reserve acres under an approved plan by the Secretary. The subsection limits haying to no more frequently than once in every three years with not less than 25 percent of the acres remaining unharvested and includes greater flexibility for the Secretary to determine the frequency and duration for grazing of enrolled acres and fixes an upper limit on stocking rates if the grazing is to occur during the nesting season. Subsection (b) further allows intermittent or seasonal vegetative buffer practices incidental to production activity on adjacent land and provides for a 25 percent reduction in the annual rental payment for use of the land unless the activity is used to address a mid-contract management requirement which would result in no deduction. Finally, this subsection includes a provision to automatically make the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) eligible for grazing when the livestock assistance program is engaged because of drought.

Subsection (c) amends section 1233 of the Food Security Act of 1985 to provide clearer authority for the Secretary to waive planned mid-contract management requirements when the use of the cover in response to a natural disaster or adverse weather resulted in the same effect on the cover as the planned management activity.

Sec. 2205. Payments

Subsection (a) amends section 1234(b) of the Food Security Act of 1985 to reduce practice and measure establishment cost share from 50 percent to no more than 40 percent, and limits the cost share for the seed component of the cover establishment to 25 percent of the seed cost. The subsection further places a cap on any incentive payments for installing practices to not exceed the actual cost of the practice. Finally, the language prevents the Secretary from making a cost-share payment when grazing is used as a mid-contract management practice.

Subsection (b) amends section 1234(c) of the Food Security Act of 1985 to preserve incentive payments for tree thinning and related forest stand management, but reduces the payments from 150 percent to 100 percent of the cost.

Subsection (c) amends section 1234(d) of the Food Security Act of 1985 to require USDA, in determining rental rates, to consider the impact to local farmland rental market; and to reduce the rental payment to 80 percent of the established rental rate at the time of enrollment. COMMITTEE CONSIDERATION

I. HEARINGS

The Committee on Agriculture and the six Subcommittees held 21 hearings during the 115th Congress in anticipation of the 2018 Farm Bill.

On February 15, 2017, the Full Committee held a hearing entitled, “Rural Economic Outlook: Setting the Stage for the Next Farm Bill” where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

- Dr. Robert Johansson, Chief Economist, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C.
- Dr. Nathan S. Kauffman, Assistant Vice President and Omaha Branch Executive, Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City, Omaha Branch, Omaha, NE
- Dr. Joe L. Outlaw, Professor and Extension Economist, and Co-Director of the Agricultural and Food Policy Center, Texas A&M University, Department of Agricultural Economics, College Station, TX
- Dr. Patrick Westhoff, Professor, Director for the Food and Agricultural Policy Research Institute, University of Missouri, Columbia, MO
- Dr. D. Scott Brown, State Agricultural Extension Economist and Assistant Professor, University of Missouri, Columbia, MO

This hearing focused on the current state of the rural economy. Witnesses were five economists from USDA, the Federal Reserve, and land-grant universities who provided data and perspective on the significant challenges facing America’s farmers, ranchers, and their rural neighbors. With net farm income expected to be down 50 percent over four years from its peak in 2013, concerns on the economic realities are front and center for the upcoming discussion on the farm bill. Producers need a reliable farm safety net that provides reliable risk management tools in periods of low prices. Witnesses described their concerns on the economy, but also some bright spots when comparing the current situation to the farm crisis of the 1980s. Dairy and cotton were both of particular focus of questions, with the economists on the panel providing perspective on their concerns with markets and current policy for those commodities.

On February 16, 2017, the Full Committee held a hearing entitled, “Pros and Cons of Restricting SNAP Purchases” where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

- Dr. Angela K. Rachidi, Research Fellow in Poverty Studies, American Enterprise Institute, Washington, D.C.

- Dr. Diane Whitmore Schanzenback, Director, The Hamilton Project, Senior Fellow, Economic Studies, Brookings Institution, Washington, D.C.

- Mr. John Weidman, Deputy Executive Director, The Food Trust, Philadelphia, PA
- Dr. Brian Wansink, John S. Dyson Professor of Marketing and Director of the Cornell University Food and Brand Lab, Ithaca, NY

In this hearing Members discussed the implications of further restricting what can be purchased with SNAP dollars, the implementation process for retailers, and the impact that restrictions, incentives, and nutrition education have on consumer behavior change. The hearing focused on the best avenue to improve the diets of low-income Americans. Members heard from a variety of perspectives related to the impact of restricting food purchases within SNAP; and their applicable impacts on health, behavior patterns, as well as from a representative from the retail industry.

On February 28, 2017, the Subcommittee on Conservation and Forestry held a hearing entitled, “The Next Farm Bill: Conservation Policy” where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

- The Honorable John F. Piotti, President, American Farmland Trust, Washington, D.C.

This Subcommittee hearing evaluated reforms made to the conservation title (Title II) in the past farm bill. Under the 2014 Farm Bill, conservation programs were consolidated and reformed to provide flexibility and to reduce duplication across programs. The farm bill provides farmers, ranchers, foresters, and landowners with voluntary, incentive-based financial and technical assistance for conservation practices. Testimony provided feedback on consolidation as well as suggestions for policy changes in the next farm bill. The need for technical assistance was a priority for all the witnesses, for working lands programs and land retirement programs. All witnesses supported incentive-based, voluntary conservation as the best way to provide benefits to the environment, the farmer, the public, and wildlife.

Through this hearing, the Committee sought to develop a better understanding of, and record of support for, USDA's trade promotion and market development programs—namely the Market Access Program (MAP) and the Foreign Market Development (FMD) program. The hearing evaluated the effectiveness of the 2014 Farm Bill programs aimed at benefiting specialty crop production, which can be found in multiple titles. Witnesses raised concerns on a host of different programs, such as research funding, pest and disease control, trade promotion programs, and immigration policy.

On March 16, 2017, the Subcommittee on Biotechnology, Horticulture, and Research held a hearing entitled, “The Next Farm Bill: Agricultural Research” where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

This hearing gave representatives from four of the major livestock producer groups the opportunity to discuss their experiences with existing programs and initiatives, as well as an opportunity to generally discuss the issues facing the livestock industry, and namely, to lay out their priorities for the upcoming farm bill.

With implementation nearing completion, much of Act has been implemented satisfactorily by USDA’s Farm Service Agency (FSA) and Risk Management Agency (RMA). However, a small number of technical items have the potential to produce many unintended consequences if they are not implemented as Congress intended. Subcommittee Members heard implementation updates from the two witnesses—the RMA Administrator and the FSA Administrator. Subcommittee Members inquired about different outstanding implementation issues, including assignment of yields on generic base acres; use of cover crops on generic base acres; administrative FSA counties; and others.

- Mr. Jonathan Webb, Director of Foundations and Community Engagement, Feed the Children, Edmond, OK

This hearing is a continuation of the full-scale review, of the SNAP program the Agriculture Committee is conducting entitled, The Past, Present, and Future of SNAP. This hearing provided Members of the Committee a big picture view of the world of nutrition to understand that the government is not alone in providing nutrition assistance. Many charitable organizations and non-governmental entities play a critical role in helping families overcome poverty. Our witnesses from the charitable sector discussed the collaboration that must exist between the private-sector and the government to best fight hunger and poverty.

This hearing provided Members of the Committee a big picture view of the world of government nutrition. It is important for Members to understand that SNAP, while it is the largest, is not the only government program providing nutrition assistance and fighting poverty. There are at least 17 other federally funded nutrition programs helping families overcome poverty, which together account for more than $100 billion every year in domestic food assistance. Members heard from witnesses suggestions on how to improve coordination among various agencies and programs to reduce duplication and better target unmet needs.

This hearing continued upon the Committee’s review of the Past, Present and Future of SNAP. The focus of this hearing was for Members to better understand the ways individuals move out of poverty and into employment and higher earning jobs. For most individuals, getting an entry-level job is easier than maintaining that job, or improving toward higher paying jobs that can actually support their families. We heard from witnesses who work directly with low-income or unemployed clients about the innovative methods they utilize for helping their clients move out of poverty and up the economic ladder. One witness described his organization's three week attitudinal job prep class for clients with limited work experience. Another witness described conducting comprehensive assessments of clients with medical or mental health barriers to determine what capabilities they do have so they could be matched with appropriate work. The panel was consistent that these shorter-term efforts must be accompanied by long-term case management in order for individuals to achieve overall success.

On June 11, 2015, the Subcommittee on Conservation and Forestry held a hearing entitled, "Implementing the Agricultural Act of 2014: Conservation Programs" where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

Members heard testimony from Natural Resources Conservation Service Chief Jason Weller and Farm Service Agency Administrator Val Dolcini. The second panel comprised stakeholders representing conservation districts, commodity organizations, farmland trusts, and sportsmen groups. Members were especially concerned with the implementation of the linkage of conservation to crop insurance premium subsidies, and the requirement of an AD-1026 form to be filed by June 1, 2015. Other topics of discussion were implementation of new Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) provisions and the new Regional Conservation Partnership Program (RCPP).

On June 25, 2015, the Subcommittee on Biotechnology, Horticulture, and Research held a hearing entitled, "Review of USDA Marketing Programs" where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

- Dr. Craig Morris, Deputy Administrator, Livestock Poultry and Seed Program, Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA, Washington, D.C.

The purpose of this subcommittee hearing was to review the programs of AMS to gain insight into how a national standard for genetic engineering marketing claims might work. The Quality Assessment Division's (QAD) Audit Services Branch (ASB) within the Agricultural Marketing Service, Livestock, Poultry, and Seed Program, provides a family of user-fee-funded, audit based third-party verification programs and services to the agricultural industry under its Quality Systems Verification Programs (QSVP). The QSVP are designed to provide suppliers the opportunity to assure customers of their ability to provide consistent quality products or services. Under a QSVP, a supplier's documented quality management system is verified through independent third-party audits conducted by qualified QAD staff. During an audit, a client's documented quality management system is verified to assure customer requirements and marketing points are being adhered to. In order to ensure consistent auditing practices and promote international recognition of audit results, ASB auditors utilize the International Organization for Standardization (ISO) 19011:2011 guidelines for quality management systems auditing. Within the umbrella of QSVP, there are three primary audit programs: Process Verified Program, Quality System Assessment Program, and the Accreditation Program.

On June 25, 2015, the Subcommittee on Nutrition held a joint hearing with the Subcommittee on Human Resources, of the Committee on Ways and Means, entitled, "Past, Present, and Future of SNAP: How Our Welfare System Can Discourage Work" where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

- Ms. Olivia Golden, Executive Director, Center for Law and Social Policy (CLASP), Washington, D.C.
- Dr. Eugene Steuerle, Senior Fellow, Urban Institute, Washington, D.C.

This hearing is a continuation of the full-scale review, of the SNAP program the Agriculture Committee is conducting known as the Past, Present, and Future of SNAP. As we have heard through our review, sometimes higher earnings do not necessarily translate to higher total income. Low-income families often receive many types of welfare and tax benefits, such as assistance with food, housing, and day care costs; help with medical costs; or tax refunds to supplement earnings from work. While the goal of these programs is often to support and encourage employment, benefit "phase-out rules"—especially when combined across multiple programs—mean that they may do just the opposite. This hearing provided information on how these program interactions discourage work and possible solutions to address the problem to ensure that work always pays.

On July 15, 2015, the Subcommittee on Nutrition held a hearing entitled, "Past, Present, and Future of SNAP: Developing and Using Evidence-Based Solutions" where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

- Mr. James D. Weill, J.D., President, Food Research and Action Center, Washington, D.C.
- Dr. James X. Sullivan, Rev. Thomas J. McDonagh, C.S.C., Associate Professor of Economics, University of Notre Dame, and Director, Wilson Sheehan Lab for Economic Opportunities, South Bend, IN

- Mr. Jeremy K. Everett, Director, Texas Hunger Initiative, Waco, TX

This hearing is a continuation of the full-scale review, of the SNAP program the Agriculture Committee is conducting known as the Past, Present, and Future of SNAP. Evidence-based solutions are determined through program evaluation. It is a robust approach to collecting, analyzing, interpreting, and communicating information about the effectiveness of social programs or intervention, which are the variations or additional services within the program, for the purpose of improving social conditions. Social science research methods have greatly improved program metrics: reducing the cost, and increasing the timeliness and usability of more sophisticated results that can specifically isolate the positive and negative impacts of interventions. Yet, these advancements have yet to catch on in SNAP. By knowing what works and what doesn't, limited program resources can be better targeted to those interventions that have the greatest impact to ultimately improve the program.

On July 9, 2015, the Subcommittee on Livestock and Foreign Agriculture held a hearing entitled, "U.S. International Food Aid Programs: Oversight and Accountability" where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

- Ms. Catherine M. Trujillo, Acting Deputy Inspector General, U.S. Agency for International Development, Washington, D.C.
- Mr. Rodney G. DeSmet, Deputy Assistant Inspector General for Audit, USDA Office of the Inspector General, Washington, D.C.

This hearing was the second in a series to review current international food aid programs implemented by USAID and USDA. Witnesses from the Government Accountability Office (GAO) and the USDA and USAID Offices of the Inspector General testified about their work to monitor the implementation of various food aid projects. The Members and witnesses made clear that efforts have only just begun to evaluate the issues that come with shifting to cash-based assistance, and much more attention to the matter is needed in order to strike the proper balance of in-kind and cash-based assistance made available through the next farm bill.

On September 30, 2015, the Full Committee held a hearing entitled, "U.S. International Food Aid Programs: Stakeholder Perspectives" where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

- Mr. John Didion, CEO, Didion Milling, Johnson Creek, WI
- Mr. Jeffrey L. Peanick, CEO, Breedlove Foods, Inc., Lubbock, TX

- Mr. Wade Cowan, President, American Soybean Association, Brownfield, TX
- Mr. James William Warshaw, Chairman, Food Aid Subcommittee USA Rice, Lake Charles, LA

The purpose of this hearing was to continue the Committee's review of U.S. international food aid programs by giving private voluntary organizations, commodity groups, and agricultural suppliers an opportunity to share their experiences regarding the strengths and potential weaknesses of the current slate of programs administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID). The hearing helped Members develop a better understanding of the implementing partners' respective roles in the overall scheme of international food aid, and the witnesses' input will serve as a valuable guide for future farm bill negotiations through which the Committee will strive to strike the appropriate balance between in-kind and cash-based assistance.

On October 27, 2015, the Subcommittee on Nutrition held a hearing entitled, "Past, Present, and Future of SNAP: Breaking the Cycle" where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

- Dr. Ron Haskins, Senior Fellow, Economic Studies and Co-Director, Brookings Institution Center on Children and Families, Washington, D.C.

This hearing explored the impact that poverty has on children and what factors can help to improve the likelihood of success as an adult. Parents want their children to have a better chance at succeeding than they did—it's the definition of economic mobility and the American Dream. This can be a tough goal to attain if the child grows up in a stressful and unstable environment. Like prior hearings, the importance of a holistic approach to addressing poverty is required in order to help children to break the cycle. Testimony was presented by policy experts and an individual who has first-hand experience breaking the cycle of poverty.

On November 18, 2015, the Full Committee on Agriculture held a hearing entitled, "Past, Present, and Future of SNAP: The National Commission on Hunger" where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

This hearing explored the challenges and barriers faced by low-income seniors, veterans, and active-duty military. These demographics are more vulnerable to disabilities, metabolic illnesses, and mental impairments that impede their ability to be fully independent. As said in prior hearings, the importance of a holistic approach to addressing poverty is required in order to best serve the needs of these special populations. Testimony was presented by advocacy organizations, policy experts, and an individual who has first-hand experience dealing with hunger in a low-income military family.

Members learned how incentives are increasing the consumption of healthier foods; explored the challenges and opportunities in incentives moving forward; and learned about opportunities for the local agriculture economies. Testimony was presented by recipient organizations of the FINI grant, a healthcare professional, and a SNAP recipient.

On July 6, 2016, the Full Committee on Agriculture held a hearing entitled, “Past, Present, and Future of SNAP: Evaluating Error Rates and Anti-Fraud Measures to Enhance Program Integrity” where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

- Ms. Jessica Shahin, SNAP Associate Administrator, Food & Nutrition Service, USDA, Washington, D.C.
- Ms. Kay E. Brown, Director, Education, Workforce, & Income Security, U.S. Government Accountability Office, Washington, D.C.
- The Honorable Dave Yost, Auditor of State, Ohio Department of Job and Family Services, Columbus, OH

In this hearing Members learned what distinguishes an error rate from a fraud rate, what factors determine the reported rate, and how these measures impact program integrity. Error rates are mainly calculated as under- or over-payments to a recipient and are unintentional administrative errors. Fraud can happen at the retailer or individual level, and it is an intentional misuse of Federal SNAP dollars. Witnesses discussed what the Federal and state governments, respectively, are in charge of, what program integrity measures are currently in place to prevent fraud, and what is being done at the Federal level to track and calculate state error reports.

On September 13, 2016, the Subcommittee on Nutrition held a hearing entitled, “Past, Present, and Future of SNAP: Improving Innovation and Success in Employment and Training Programs” where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

- Mr. David Stillman, J.D., Assistant Secretary for the Economic Services Administration, Washington Department of Social and Health Services, Olympia, WA
- Mr. Jon Anderson, Deputy Director, Georgia Division of Family and Children Services, Office of Family Independence, Atlanta, GA
- Mr. Peter Weber, Founder, Fresno Bridge Academy, Fresno, CA

In this hearing Members heard from organization representatives to discuss the initiatives by states to further improve their

SNAP Employment and Training (SNAP E&T) programs to better assist recipients' movement into the workforce, or in attaining additional skills to increase earnings. The purpose of the program is to help recipients meet work requirements, and to gain the skills, training, or experience to increase their ability to obtain regular employment. Testimony was presented by state agencies on their efforts to improve the Employment and Training programs in their communities.

On November 16, 2016, the Full Committee on Agriculture held a hearing entitled, "Past, Present, and Future of SNAP: Opportunities for Improving Access to Food" where the following witnesses testified on matters included in H.R. 2:

- Mr. Eric French, Director of Grocery, Amazon, Seattle, WA
- Mr. Gunnar Lovelace, Founder/Co-CEO, Thrive Market, Marina del Ray, CA
- Mr. Mike J. Beal, J.D., Vice President, Secretary, and Chief Operating Officer, Balls Food Stores, Kansas City, KS; on behalf of National Grocers Association
- Ms. Pamela Hess, Executive Director, Arcadia Center for Sustainable Food and Agriculture, Alexandria, VA
- Ms. Melinda R. Newport, M.S., R.D./L.D., Director, WIC/Child Nutrition Programs, Chickasaw Nation Department of Health, Ada, OK

In this hearing Members heard from representatives to discuss how innovative strategies are being used to improve access to food and to incentivize healthy food purchases. The discussion focused on the potential of online retailing, explored the challenges and opportunities in these strategies to increase access, and examined how technology plays a role in incentivizing healthier purchases. Testimony was presented by organizations that are working creatively to increase the capacity of their organizations to provide nutritious food to low-income individuals in low access areas.

II. FULL COMMITTEE

On April 18, 2018, the Committee on Agriculture met pursuant to notice, with a quorum present to consider H.R. 2. Chairman Conaway made an opening statement as did Ranking Member Peterson.

Chairman Conaway placed H.R. 2 before the Committee and, without objection a first reading of the bill was waived and it was open to amendment at any point.

Chairman Conaway stated that although the bill was open to amendment at any point, he encouraged that amendments be offered on a Title by Title basis.

Chairman Conaway offered an En Bloc Amendment. Discussion occurred and by a voice vote, the amendment passed.

Chairman Conaway recognized Mr. Yoho to offer an amendment to Title IX to provide Congress with a report on potential authorities within USDA for regulation of gene-edited animals. Mr. Yoho withdrew his amendment.

Mr. King offered an amendment to Title XI to stop states from regulating the production and manufacturing of agricultural products across state lines. Mr. Denham offered a second degree amendment striking the underlying amendment and replacing it with language requiring USDA to report on existing State laws related to the production of agricultural products, the sale and labeling of agricultural products, and the detection and prevention of invasive pests and diseases. Mr. Denham called for a recorded vote on his second degree amendment, and it failed by a vote of 12 yeas to 33 nays. A vote was then taken on the King amendment. Mr. King's amendment passed by a voice vote.

Mr. Denham offered an amendment to Title XI that would amend the Animal Welfare Act to prohibit people from knowingly slaughtering a dog or cat for human consumption. The amendment passed by a voice vote.

There being no further amendments, Mr. Thompson moved that H.R. 2, as amended, be reported favorably to the House with an amendment in the nature of a substitute consisting of the amendments agreed to in the markup and with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and the bill pass. The bill passed by a vote of 26 yeas to 20 nays.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Chairman Conaway advised Members that pursuant to the rules of the House of Representatives Members had until April 23, 2018, to file any supplemental, minority, additional, or dissenting views with the Committee.

Without objection, staff was given permission to make any necessary clerical, technical or conforming changes to reflect the intent of the Committee. Chairman Conaway thanked all of the Members and adjourned the meeting.

COMMITTEE VOTES

In compliance with clause 3(b) of Rule XIII of the House of Representatives, the Committee sets forth the record of the following roll call votes taken with respect to H.R. 2.

Rollcall No. 1

COMMITTEE OVERSIGHT FINDINGS

Pursuant to clause 3(c)(1) of Rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee on Agriculture's oversight findings and recommendations are reflected in the body of this report.

BUDGET ACT COMPLIANCE (SECTIONS 308, 402, AND 423)

The provisions of clause 3(c)(2) of Rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives and section 308(a)(1) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (relating to estimates of new budget authority, new spending authority, new credit authority, or increased or decreased revenues or tax expenditures) are not considered applicable. The estimate and comparison required to be prepared by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office under clause 3(c)(3) of Rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives and sections 402 and 423 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 submitted to the Committee prior to the filing of this report are as follows:

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, May 2, 2018.

Hon. K. MICHAEL CONAWAY,
Chairman, Committee on Agriculture, House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for H.R. 2, the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contacts are Kathleen FitzGerald (nutrition provisions) and Jim Langley (other provisions).

Sincerely,

KEITH HALL,
Director.

Enclosure.

H.R. 2—Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018

Summary: The Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018 would amend and extend some of the nation's major programs for income support, food and nutrition, land conservation, trade promotion, rural development, research, forestry, horticulture, and other miscellaneous programs administered by the Department of Agriculture (USDA) for five years through 2023.

CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 2 would increase net direct spending by $3.2 billion over the 2019–2023 period and by $0.5 billion over the 2019–2028 period, relative to CBO's baseline projections. As specified in law, those baseline projections incorporate the assumption that many expiring programs continue to operate after their authorizations expire in the same manner as they did before such expiration. The cost of extending those authorizations through 2023 would total $387 billion, but because they are already included in the baseline, those costs are not attributable to this bill. CBO also estimates that enacting the bill would increase revenues by $0.5 billion over the 2019–2028 period.

In addition, H.R. 2 would authorize the appropriation of specific amounts, mostly for a wide variety of existing and new USDA programs. Assuming appropriation of the specified amounts, CBO estimates that implementing those provisions would cost $24.3 billion over the 2019–2023 period.

Because enacting H.R. 2 would affect direct spending and revenues, pay-as-you-go procedures apply.

CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 2 would not increase net direct spending or on-budget deficits in any of the four consecutive 10-year periods beginning in 2029.

H.R. 2 would impose intergovernmental and private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA). In the aggregate, CBO estimates, the costs of mandates on public entities would exceed the annual threshold established in UMRA for intergovernmental mandates ($80 million in 2018, adjusted annually for inflation) in at least four of the first five years that the mandates were in effect. The costs of mandates on private entities would be below the annual threshold established in UMRA for private-sector mandates ($160 million in 2018, adjusted annually for inflation).

Estimated cost to the Federal Government: The estimated budgetary impact of H.R. 2 is shown in Table 1. The costs of this legislation fall within budget functions 270 (energy), 300 (natural resources and environment), 350 (agriculture), 450 (community and regional development), and 600 (income security).

Components may not sum to totals because of rounding.

^a The estimate includes only amounts specifically authorized to be appropriated. CBO has not completed an estimate of the discretionary costs of implementing provisions that do not authorize the appropriation of specific amounts.

Basis of estimate: For this estimate, CBO assumes that H.R. 2 will be enacted near the end of fiscal year 2018. The bill would provide direct spending authority for most of the USDA programs authorized, amended, or created by the legislation through the 2019–2023 period. Following the baseline projection rules in section 257 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, CBO estimated the 10-year cost of the bill by assuming that most of those programs would continue to operate indefinitely beyond that five-year authorization period. Combined with the estimated spending under the April 2018 baseline projections for those programs, CBO estimates that enacting the bill would bring total spending for those USDA programs to $430 billion over the 2019–2023 period and $868 billion over the 2019–2028 period.

Direct spending and revenues

Relative to spending projected in the baseline, CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 2 would increase direct spending by $3.2 billion over the 2019–2023 period. Following the rules specified in the Deficit Control Act, CBO assumes that the changes made to those programs would continue after 2023, the final year of authorization under the bill. On that basis, CBO estimates that direct spending would decrease by $2.7 billion over the 2024–2028 period, for a net increase in direct spending of $0.5 billion over the 2019–2028 period. CBO also estimates that enacting the bill would increase revenues by $0.5 billion over the 2019–2028 period.

Detailed estimates of changes in direct spending and revenues for the various titles appear in Table 2. Further details of those estimates by major section of each title appear in Table 3.

Title I, Commodities. Title I would reauthorize and amend the farm commodity support programs administered by USDA through 2023. CBO estimates that enacting title I would increase direct spending by $0.2 billion over the 2019–2028 period. (The current-law authorization of most programs will expire on September 30, 2018, although some payments will be made after that date.) The two major components of that estimate are described below.

H.R. 2 would reauthorize the two main commodity programs—Price Loss Coverage (PLC) and Agriculture Revenue Coverage (ARC)—through 2023. Under PLC, producers receive payments when the annual average market price falls below the reference price set in law. Under ARC, producers receive payments when a county’s average revenue for a crop (the product of price and production) falls below the county’s historical average revenue. Producers may receive payments from only one of those programs for the five-year period, and because of recent market prices and yields and program changes in the bill, CBO expects most producers to choose PLC.

The bill would modify the calculation of PLC benefits and redefine the reference price to allow an escalation during periods of relatively high historical commodity prices. In addition, producers in areas subject to severe drought during the 2008–2012 period would be allowed to update the yield used to calculate PLC benefits. Finally, participants who did not plant an eligible crop on their farm during the 2009–2017 period would not be permitted to receive federal payments on those program acres in the future. As a result of those changes, CBO estimates that PLC payments under section 1116 would increase by $0.4 billion over the 2019–2028 period and ARC payments under section 1117 would fall by $0.3 billion over the same period.

Components may not sum to totals because of rounding. The table excludes data on discretionary spending that would be subject to future appropriations. Estimates are relative to CBO's April 2018 baseline. For revenues, positive numbers indicate a decrease in the deficit.
 * Between -$500,000 and $500,000.
  This estimate includes direct spending effects from sections 4012, 4013, and 4014, assuming all are enacted concurrently. It also assumes that section 4006 is enacted concurrently with these sections, and it includes those interaction effects.
  This provision would affect both direct spending and revenues.

Title II, Conservation. This title would reauthorize and modify land conservation programs administered by USDA. CBO estimates that enacting those provisions would result in a net reduction in spending of $0.8 billion over the 2019–2028 period. Significant changes in conservation programs include:

- Increasing annual funding for the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (section 2302) from $1.8 billion per year under current law to $3.0 billion per year by 2023, for a total increase in spending of $7.7 billion over the 10-year period;
- Increasing annual funding for the Agricultural Conservation Easement Program and Regional Conservation Partnership Program (sections 2601 and 2704); for a total increase in spending of $3.5 billion over the 2019–2028 period;
- Increasing funding for small watershed rehabilitation by $0.1 billion per year for the 2019–2023 period and by $0.1 billion for the Feral Swine Eradication and Control Pilot Program along with other provisions (sections 2402 through 2405), for a total cost of $0.6 billion over the 2019–2028 period; and
- Repealing the Conservation Stewardship Program beginning 2019, which would reduce spending by $12.6 billion over the 2019–2028 period.

Title III, Trade. Title III would reauthorize USDA’s Food for Progress program and consolidate four other market development programs into a single program. The Market Access Program, the Foreign Market Development Cooperator Program, Technical Assistance for Specialty Crops, and the E. (Kika) De La Garza Emerging Markets Program would be combined into the proposed International Market Development Program. CBO estimates that spending under the combined program would increase by $450 million over the 2019–2028 period.

Title IV, Nutrition. Title IV would reauthorize the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) and related nutrition programs through fiscal year 2023 and make several changes to those programs. CBO estimates that enacting title IV would increase direct spending by $1.8 billion over the 2019–2023 period and by $0.5 billion over the 2019–2028 period. It also would increase revenues by $0.5 billion over the 2019–2028 period.

Section 4015, Workforce Solutions. Under section 4015, starting in 2021 certain SNAP recipients must either be employed or in a state-government-sponsored training program unless they qualify for certain waivers. CBO estimates that this provision would reduce spending on benefits by $9.2 billion over the 2019–2028 period because it would cause some people to lose eligibility. The federal government’s administrative costs for this provision would increase by $7.7 billion over the same period, CBO estimates, mostly to fund training. Under this provision, SNAP spending would decline, on net, by $1.5 billion over the 2019–2028 period.

Beginning in 2021, SNAP recipients between the ages of 18 and 59 who are neither disabled nor caring for a child under the age of 6 would need to either work or participate in a training program for 20 hours each week; that requirement would increase to 25 hours each week in 2026. Pregnant women, people who care for an incapacitated person, and anyone a state determines is unable for “good cause” to meet the requirement would be exempted. Criteria defined in the bill would permit a state to waive the work requirement for people living in areas with high unemployment. In addition, using a calculation defined in the bill, states could offer a certain number of individual monthly exemptions.

The bill would provide $1 billion each year, divided among the states, to help meet the bill's employment and training requirements. States also could provide services using their own funds, which would be matched with federal dollars (as is the case for state funding of some of the program's other administrative costs). Allowable training under the proposal includes supervised job search and job search training, educational programs to improve basic skills, subsidized employment, volunteer work (unpaid and limited to 6 out of 12 months), and other programs designed either to improve recipients' employability or their ability to retain employment. States would be required to provide case management services to training participants.

Implementation Timeline. CBO expects that states would not be able to offer training to all eligible recipients when the requirement takes effect in 2021, or even by the end of 2028. Although each state currently operates employment and training programs for SNAP recipients, the scope of those programs varies widely, and CBO expects that offering training services to all eligible recipients would require many states to expand their programs substantially. CBO estimates that by the end of 2028, about 80 percent of the beneficiaries who are subject to the work requirement would be offered such services through a state program. CBO assumes that SNAP recipients would not lose benefits if the states failed to offer those people slots in employment and training programs.

Able-Bodied Adults Without Dependents. Under current law, time limits are placed on program eligibility for able-bodied adults between the ages of 18 and 49 who have no dependents and are not disabled. (Those limits may be waived if a beneficiary is working or has received some other waiver.) CBO estimates that when the policy goes into effect, such recipients will constitute 6.5 percent of all beneficiaries. Under the proposal, that group ultimately would decline by 7 percent, CBO projects, primarily because of tighter criteria for states to waive time limits for people who live in areas with high unemployment.

Other Recipients. To estimate the number of affected beneficiaries, CBO used USDA's quality control data for SNAP to identify additional recipients who might be subject to the work requirement. Using those data, CBO estimates that—excluding able-bodied adults without dependents—under current law, 17 percent of SNAP recipients are between the ages of 18 and 59, are not receiving disability benefits, and are not caring for a child under the age of 6.

Using those same data, CBO estimates that in an average month, 31 percent of those "other" SNAP recipients work enough hours to meet the bill's work requirement. CBO further estimates that 2 percent of that group would meet the requirement through participation in a training program under the proposal, 8 percent would receive waivers for living in a high-unemployment area, and 14 percent in an average month would receive an individual exemption (as would be newly calculated under that section of the bill). CBO estimates that another 21 percent of the "other" group, or about half of those remaining, would qualify for an exemption from the new policy for another reason, including disability or unfitness to work (without receiving disability benefits), pregnancy, caring for an incapacitated person, or for good cause, as defined by the state. Ultimately, of the 17 percent of people that CBO identified in the quality control data as potentially subject to the requirement, we expect that 76 percent would remain on SNAP and the remaining 24 percent would no longer receive benefits under the proposal.

Total Changes in Benefit Spending. In total, CBO estimates that in 2028 the SNAP caseload under the bill's proposed work requirement would be lower by about 1.2 million people in an average month than it is under current law, or about 3.7 percent of the total caseload. CBO estimates that about 11 percent of the 1.2 million people who would no longer receive benefits would be able-bodied adults between the ages of 18 and 49 without dependents. About 27 percent of that group would be between the ages of 50 and 59 and without dependents. The other 62 percent would be adults between the ages of 18 and 59 who live in households with children (but not including those caring for children under 6). CBO estimates that, on average in 2028, those people would lose an annual benefit amount of $1,816.

Changes in Administrative Spending. Under current law, all states share an annual grant of $110 million for employment and training programs for SNAP recipients. Each state also can receive federal funds that match dollar-for-dollar their additional spending on workforce training for SNAP recipients or for reimbursing participants for certain expenses incurred during training, such as child care or transportation.

Under section 4015, federal funding for employment and training services would increase to $270 million in 2020 and to $1 billion in every year thereafter. As under current law, those funds would be shared by the states. CBO estimates that it will take some time for states to expand their programs enough to spend all of the additional funding. From 2021 to 2025, CBO estimates, the additional grant money would pay for services that under current law are covered by matching funds; as a result, federal spending for matching funds would be less than under current law. From 2026 onward, however, federal matching funds would increase relative to CBO's baseline as states expand their training programs to serve more recipients. In total, direct federal funding for grants would increase by $7.3 billion and federal matching funds would decrease by $0.6 billion over the 10-year period, for a net increase of $6.7 billion in spending for employment and training under SNAP.

CBO also estimates that spending on other administrative expenses would increase because of an increase in the cost to states of tracking who is meeting the work requirements (or is exempt from them) under the proposal. Those additional costs would be partially offset by a reduction in administrative costs because of the overall reduction in the number of people receiving benefits. On net, CBO estimates there would be an increase in administrative expenses of $0.9 billion over the 2019–2028 period.

Section 4006, Update to Categorical Eligibility. Under current law, most households that receive SNAP benefits have categorical eligibility—they automatically qualify for benefits because they participate in certain other federal or state programs. Many states have implemented a system, known as broad-based categorical eligibility, under which a household automatically qualifies because it receives or is authorized to receive noncash benefits under the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) program. At the state's option, households can qualify for SNAP benefits if their gross monthly income is up to 200 percent of the federal poverty guidelines (commonly called the federal poverty level, or FPL).

Section 4006 of title IV would limit categorical eligibility to households whose gross monthly income is no more than 130 percent of the FPL and who receive cash assistance or "ongoing and substantial services." Households with an elderly or disabled member would still be eligible under the higher threshold of 200 percent of the FPL.

CBO estimates that in an average year, about 400,000 households would lose SNAP eligibility as a result of the change to the gross income threshold. There would be an additional effect on children who are categorically eligible for free meals at school because of their eligibility for SNAP. If their households lost SNAP eligibility because of the revised threshold and their families were not otherwise eligible for free meals, those children would be eligible only for reduced-price or paid meals. Those meals have smaller reimbursement rates to the meal providers and thus the federal costs of the child nutrition program would decline. CBO estimates that in an average year, about 265,000 children would lose access to free school meals under this provision. Based on conversations with policy experts, CBO expects that the requirement for households to receive ongoing and substantial services would not affect how states apply broad-based categorical eligibility to eligible households. CBO estimates that, including the SNAP and child nutrition effects, enacting section 4006 would save $5 billion over the 2019–2028 period.

Section 4008, Earned Income Deduction. Under current law, SNAP benefits are based on income reported by each household to enroll in and remain eligible for the program. Under section 4008, the amount of earnings that SNAP households can deduct from their income to arrive at the reportable total would rise from 20 percent, under current law, to 22 percent.

CBO used quality control data from SNAP to recalculate benefits for households currently claiming the deduction. CBO estimates that employed recipients would increase their earnings slightly in response to the new rate and that the overall costs of the provision would be lower by about 11 percent compared to what costs would be if there were no change in earnings among employed recipients. CBO also anticipates that the proposal would allow a small number of new households whose income is now too high to qualify to enroll in SNAP—a change that raised CBO's estimate of the overall costs of section 4008 by about 3 percent. In total, CBO estimates, the provision would increase spending on SNAP benefits by $4.6 billion over the 2019–2028 period (or 0.8 percent of total spending for benefits over that period).

Section 4022, National Gateway. This section would require all SNAP transactions to be routed through a national gateway that would collect fees from the state contractors that provide Electronic Benefits Transfer (EBT) services and from the businesses that manage electronic payments for retailers. CBO considers such fees to be revenues. These revenues would be used to pay for the costs of operating the gateway. CBO estimates that the gateway provision also would increase SNAP administrative costs because the states' EBT contractors would pass along the additional costs to the states. This section would provide about $10 million annually to cover start-up and contract-monitoring costs. CBO estimates that from 2019 to 2028, this provision would increase revenues by $465 million and direct spending by $601 million, for a net increase in the deficit of $136 million.

Section 4010, Standard Utility Allowances. Under current law, households qualify for a heating or cooling standard utility allowance (SUA) if they provide proof that they either pay heating or cooling expenses or receive more than $20 in assistance through the federal Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP). Some states currently send $21 in LIHEAP benefits to SNAP participants so that they automatically qualify for the allowance. The value of the SUA is used, along with other factors, to determine the amount of housing expenses that households can deduct from their income in calculating SNAP benefit amounts.

Section 4010 of title IV would prohibit SNAP households receiving energy assistance from automatically qualifying for those allowances. CBO estimates that under this provision, about 560,000 households would have their SNAP benefits reduced by an average of $84 per month, as their income would be higher because they would no longer qualify for the SUA. About two-thirds of the affected households would be those that qualify under current law for the SUA as a result of the minimum LIHEAP benefit. This provision would reduce direct spending by $5.2 billion over the 2019–2028 period.

Section 4011, Child Support. This section would make several changes to SNAP rules related to child support. In total, CBO estimates, the provisions would increase direct spending by $3.5 billion over the 2019–2028 period.

Under current law, states may require SNAP participants who are parents of children under age 18 to cooperate with child support enforcement agencies in order to receive benefits. Five states and Guam require that, and section 4011 would direct all states to implement that requirement. CBO estimates that enacting the provision would have two major budgetary effects in states that currently do not require such cooperation: First, benefits would be lower for households that began to receive child support, and second, the costs of operating the child support program would increase.

CBO expects that under current law, about 4 million households with an absent parent will participate in SNAP in 2028 and that three-quarters of those households will receive no child support that year. Using data from the Office of Child Support Enforcement concerning payments made to participants in TANF—which has a cooperation requirement—CBO estimates that about 570,000 additional SNAP households would receive child support in 2028, the first year in which the policy is fully phased in. On the basis of the child support payments reported for SNAP recipients in recent years, CBO estimates that, on average, those households would receive about $1,400 less in benefits in 2028. In total, CBO estimates, the provision would reduce direct spending on SNAP benefits by $800 million in 2028 and by $4 billion over the 2019–2028 period.

The federal government reimburses states for 66 percent of the costs they incur to process and maintain child support orders. Using census data and USDA’s quality control data, CBO estimates that child support agencies would process information for about 1.2 million additional households in 2028 and that the average cost to process and maintain each order would be about $1,000 in that year. CBO estimates that the total cost to establish and maintain orders for SNAP households would be $1.2 billion in 2028 and $7.2 billion over the 2019–2028 period. Other smaller effects would increase net costs by $0.2 billion over the same period.

Other child support provisions of the bill would have smaller budgetary effects. CBO estimates that those provisions would increase direct spending by $16 million in 2028 and by about $125 million over the 2029–2028 period.

Other Provisions. Title IV would make additional changes to SNAP and related nutrition programs, including the following:

- Sections 4002, 4003, and 4033 would amend or create several SNAP-related grant programs and pilot projects. For example, under section 4002, retailers could provide bonuses to SNAP households based on their purchases of fruits, vegetables, and milk. CBO estimates that together enacting those provisions would cost $2.3 billion over the 2019–2028 period.

- Sections 4007, 4009, 4012, 4013, 4014, and 4024 would change the way SNAP eligibility and certain benefits are calculated. For example, section 4007 would exclude up to $500 of a military housing allowance from household income in determining SNAP eligibility and benefits. CBO estimates that in total, enacting those provisions would cost $1.3 billion over the 2019–2028 period.

- Sections 4001, 4017, 4020, 4027, and 4036 would change the way states or the federal government administer SNAP benefits and operate the program. For example, section 4017 would allow SNAP participants to redeem benefits using smart phones. CBO estimates that enacting those provisions would, on net, save $324 million over the 2019–2028 period.

- Sections 4018, 4026, 4028, 4029, and 4032 would make other changes to SNAP and to the Emergency Food Assistance Program. For example, section 4026 would require the Secretary of Agriculture to collect data on the types of food that people buy with their SNAP benefits. CBO estimates that enacting those provisions would, on net, cost $251 million over the 2019–2028 period.

Interaction Effects. Title IV includes several provisions that would interact with one another. For example, the provision in section 4006 that limits categorical eligibility would interact with the provision in section 4015 that imposes work requirements on certain SNAP recipients. CBO expects that the categorical eligibility provision would decrease the number of households eligible for SNAP benefits, and that decrease would in turn reduce the savings from imposing work requirements on SNAP recipients. In total, CBO estimates, such interactions would increase costs by $30 million over the 2019–2028 period.

Title V, Credit. Title V would reauthorize farm ownership and operating loans and loan guarantees through 2023. It also would increase lending limits on loan guarantees for farm ownership and operating loans, reauthorize individual development accounts for beginning farmers and ranchers through 2023, and amend farm ownership eligibility requirements for loans to beginning farmers and ranchers.

Title V also would make technical corrections to the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act and to the Farm Credit Act of 1971 to bring the statutes into comportment with current USDA practices. CBO estimates that enacting title V would have no effect on direct spending; all of the effects on spending would be subject to appropriation.

Title VI, Rural Infrastructure and Economic Development. Title VI would eliminate the mandatory funding for USDA's Biorefinery Assistance and Rural Energy for America Programs. CBO estimates that eliminating those programs would reduce direct spending by $517 million over the 2019–2028 period.

Title VII, Research, Extension, and Related Matters. Section 7209 would reauthorize the Organic Agriculture Research and Extension Initiative through 2023. CBO estimates that provision would increase direct spending by $150 million over the 10-year period. Section 7507 would reauthorize the Beginning Farmer and Rancher Development program. CBO estimates that provision would cost $100 million over the 2019–2028 period.

Title VIII, Forestry. Title VIII would reauthorize several programs aimed at restoring and conserving forest lands and would expedite certain management activities on lands administered by the Forest Service. CBO estimates that enacting title VIII would not affect direct spending over the 2019–2028 period. All of the spending effects for this title would be subject to appropriation.

Title IX, Horticulture. Title IX would reauthorize specialty crop block grants through 2023. Section 9006 would reauthorize programs to support organic agriculture. CBO estimates those provisions would cost $10 million over the 2019–2028 period.

Title X, Crop Insurance. CBO estimates that the amendments to the federal crop insurance program would reduce spending by $0.2 billion over the 2019–2028 period. Those amendments would expand insurance coverage of forage and grazing lands (section 10001), impose higher administrative fees for catastrophic coverage (section 10002), and a reduce funding for research, development, and education assistance (sections 10008 and 10010).

Title XI, Miscellaneous. Section 11101 would authorize USDA to operate a new National Animal Disease and Preparedness Response Program, to include a vaccine bank for rapid response to animal disease outbreaks. CBO estimates that enacting that provision would cost $450 million over the 10-year period. Section 11304 would combine the Pima Cotton Trust Fund, the Wool Apparel Trust Fund, and the Wool Research and Promotion Fund into a single Textile Trust Fund that is authorized through 2023. CBO estimates the outlays from the combined fund would total $103 million over the 2019–2023 period. In total, enacting the provisions of Title XI would cost $566 million.

Components may not sum to totals because of rounding. Title I and Title X do not contain any provisions that would authorize the appropriation of specific amounts.

^a CBO estimates that implementing the bill would cost $7.1 billion after 2023.

Title VII, Research, Extension, and Related Matters. Title VII would reauthorize appropriations totaling $7.4 billion over the 2019–2023 period for various research and educational programs. CBO estimates that implementing those provisions would cost $6.4 billion over the 2019–2023 period and $1.0 billion after 2023.

Title VIII, Forestry. Title VIII would reauthorize appropriations totaling $0.5 billion over the 2019–2023 period for several forestry programs. CBO estimates that implementing those provisions would cost $0.4 billion over the 2019–2023 period and $0.1 billion after 2023.

Title IX, Horticulture. Title IX would reauthorize appropriations totaling $0.3 billion over the 2019–2023 period for the National Organic Program, the Farmers Market and Local Food Promotion program, and other programs intended to support food safety and specialty crops. CBO estimates that implementing those provisions would cost $0.3 billion over the 2019–2023 period.

Title XI, Miscellaneous. Title XI would authorize appropriations for the new Animal Disease Preparedness and Response program and would reauthorize specified amounts for outreach to socially disadvantaged farmers and veterans and for other programs. Those authorizations would total $0.3 billion over the 2019–2023 period. CBO estimates that implementing those provisions would cost $0.3 billion over the 2019–2023 period.

Uncertainty. CBO tries to produce estimates that generally reflect the middle of a range of the most likely outcomes. Estimates of commodity support programs are particularly sensitive to changes in commodity prices and production, which are sensitive to changes in weather and markets, especially trade. The nutrition estimates are particularly sensitive to how, and how quickly, the states implement the policies regarding work requirements, child support, and categorical eligibility. Changes in the state of the economy, especially inflation and unemployment, could also affect the estimated effects.

Pay-As-You-Go considerations: The Statutory Pay-As-You-Go Act of 2010 establishes budget-reporting and enforcement procedures for legislation affecting direct spending or revenues. The net changes in outlays and revenues that are subject to those pay-as-you-go procedures are shown in the following table.

Increase in long-term direct spending and deficits: CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 2 would not increase net direct spending or on-budget deficits in any of the four consecutive 10-year periods beginning in 2029.

Mandates: H.R. 2 would impose public- and private-sector mandates as defined in UMRA. In the aggregate, CBO estimates, the costs of mandates on public entities would exceed the annual threshold established in that act ($80 million in 2018, adjusted annually for inflation) for intergovernmental mandates in at least four of the first five years that the mandates were in effect. The costs of mandates on private entities would be below the annual threshold for private-sector mandates ($106 million in 2018, adjusted annually for inflation).

Mandates that apply to state governments only

The bill would impose intergovernmental mandates by amending SNAP eligibility requirements, placing new responsibilities on states as administrators of Child Support Enforcement, and requiring new state activities in the SNAP program. For large entitlement grant programs like SNAP and Child Support Enforcement, UMRA defines an increase in the stringency of conditions on states or localities as an intergovernmental mandate if the affected governments lack authority to offset those costs while continuing to provide required services. The bill's requirements would increase the workload of state agencies in areas where they have limited flexibility to amend their responsibilities and offset additional costs and thus would be intergovernmental mandates.

The bill also would preempt state and local laws in some areas.

Various provisions of Title IV would impose mandates on state governments, as follows:

- Section 4011 would require SNAP beneficiaries to cooperate with state child support agencies to receive benefits, increasing the population that would be reviewed for compliance with orders for child support. Consequently, the increased workload associated with the new requirements would be an intergovernmental mandate. Under current law, the federal government reimburses states for two-thirds of the administrative costs for child support activities. CBO estimates that the incremental cost to states of the child support changes would total $1.156 billion from 2019 to 2023.

- Section 4015 would require states to offer employment and training services to SNAP recipients to satisfy new work requirements. Under this provision, states must provide sufficient hours in those activities for SNAP recipients to meet the federal requirement of 20 hours per week of work or participation in a training program (the requirement would increase to 25 hours in 2026). H.R. 2 would allow two years for implementation and would provide $1 billion annually to states, beginning in 2021, for such programs. Under current law, funding to states for employment and training programs comes from two sources: grant funding from the federal government and a 50 percent match on additional costs states incur. CBO estimates that states would expand their programs gradually, and that initially, states would replace federally matched state funds with federal grant funds. Therefore, CBO anticipates that the states would incur savings in the early years of implementation. As states implemented the work requirements fully, CBO expects, annual costs would exceed the amount of federally allocated funds; therefore, state spending (matched by federal funds) would rise and eventually impose costs on states.

- Section 4022 would increase administrative costs for states to operate EBT systems because private contractors would pass fees that are associated with operating the national gateway along to the states. Increasing the cost of complying with the existing mandate to operate an electronic benefit transfer system would impose a mandate as defined by UMRA. CBO estimates that the incremental cost of that mandate would average $2 million per year through 2023. Within a couple of years, that cost would rise to $15 million each year.

- Section 4024 would require states to offer five months of transitional SNAP benefits to households that cease to receive cash assistance under certain programs. Under current law, states may provide those benefits for up to five months. Given the small population of such recipients, CBO estimates that the mandate would impose minimal administrative costs on states.

- Sections 4001, 4015, and 4023 would impose mandates on states by increasing the administrative burden of compliance with new verification, notification, and record retention rules under SNAP. CBO estimates that the incremental costs of those mandates, in the aggregate, would be small because they represent only small increases over current requirements.

Other provisions of H.R. 2 would impose intergovernmental mandates on state and local governments by preempting local laws that regulate the sale or use of pesticides that are registered with the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and state laws that impose additional standards on agricultural products that are shipped from other states. Although the preemptions would limit the authority of state and local governments, they would impose no duty that would result in additional spending or loss of revenues.

Mandates that apply to public and private entities

H.R. 2 would impose mandates on intergovernmental and private-sector entities alike by extending for five years, through 2023, EPA's authority to collect maintenance fees for the use of certain pesticides. (Under current law, those fees are to be phased out by 2019.) CBO estimates that those fees would total $31 million annually and that most of the cost would be borne by private entities. Public entities usually receive waivers from maintenance fees for minor uses or for public health purposes.

Mandates that apply to private entities only

H.R. 2 would impose several mandates on private entities as follows:

- Section 3002 would amend country-of-origin labeling requirements for producers of agricultural commodities for foreign aid. Any costs to producers to comply with those new requirements would probably be included in the amount awarded to producers to fulfill their contracts. Therefore, CBO estimates, producers would incur minimal costs to comply with that mandate.

- Section 9119 would extend a current-law requirement, through 2025, for producers and distributors to pay pesticide registration fees to EPA. CBO estimates that those fees would total $18 million annually, on average, during the first five years that the mandate is in effect.

- Section 11612 would prohibit the knowing slaughter, transport, purchase, or possession of a dog or cat for human consumption. According to the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the dog and cat meat industry in the United States is very small. CBO estimates that any lost income to entities participating in the industry would be insignificant.

Other effects on private entities

The bill would impose additional requirements on retailers as conditions of participation in the SNAP program. The costs of those new requirements would result from participation in a voluntary federal program and thus would not be mandates on the private-sector as defined by UMRA.

Section 4022 would establish a national gateway for retailers to route EBT information to a single source that would validate and settle purchases. That operation would be covered by fees imposed on the private-sector entities that participate in the EBT system. CBO estimates that the incremental cost to those participants would be small because the fees imposed by the gateway would replace similar fees that participants already pay. Although entities that use EBT services could incur additional costs to adapt compliant systems, CBO cannot estimate the associated additional costs because of uncertainty in the design and operation of the gateway. Section 4022 also would require retail food stores that apply to accept SNAP/EBT benefits to provide the Department of Agriculture with certain information on their services and equipment. CBO estimates the costs of that requirement to be minimal.

Previous CBO estimate: On April 13, 2018, CBO transmitted a cost estimate of H.R. 2, the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018, as posted on the website of the House Committee on Agriculture on April 12, 2018. CBO's estimate of the direct spending and revenue effects of H.R. 2, as ordered reported, are the same as the estimates of the posted bill.

PART 2—COMMODITY BENEFITS

* * * * *

ORDERS

SEC. 8c. (1) The Secretary of Agriculture shall, subject to the provisions of this section, issue, and from time to time amend, orders applicable to processors, associations of producers, and others engaged in the handling of any agricultural commodity or product thereof specified in subsection (2) of this section. Such persons are referred to in this title as "handlers". Such orders shall regulate, in the manner hereinafter in this section provided, only such handling of such agricultural commodity, or product thereof, as is in the current of interstate or foreign commerce, or which directly burdens, obstructs, or affects, interstate or foreign commerce in such commodity or product thereof. In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall complete all informal rulemaking actions necessary to respond to recommendations submitted by administrative committees for such orders as expeditiously as possible, but not more than 45 days (to the extent practicable) after submission of the committee recommendations. The Secretary is authorized to implement a producer allotment program and a handler withholding program under the cranberry marketing order in the same crop year through informal rulemaking based on a recommendation and supporting economic analysis submitted by the Cranberry Marketing Committee. Such recommendation and analysis shall be submitted by the Committee no later than March 1 of each year. The Secretary shall establish time frames for each office and agency within the Department of Agriculture to consider the committee recommendations.

COMMODITIES TO WHICH APPLICABLE

(2) Orders issued pursuant to this section shall be applicable only to (A) the following agricultural commodities and the products thereof (except canned or frozen pears, grapefruit, cherries, apples, or cranberries, the products of naval stores, and the products of honeybees), or to any regional, or market classification of any such commodity or product: Milk, fruits (including filberts, almonds, pecans and walnuts but not including apples, other than apples produced in the States of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, New York, Michigan, Maryland, New Jersey, Indiana, California, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico, Illinois, and Ohio, and not including fruits for canning or freezing other than pears, olives, grapefruit, cherries, caneberries (including raspberries, blackberries, and loganberries), cranberries, and apples produced in the States named above except Washington, Oregon, and Idaho), tobacco, vegetables (not including vegetables, other than asparagus, for canning or freezing and not including potatoes for canning, freezing, or other processing), hops, honeybees and naval stores as included in the Naval Stores Act and standards established thereunder (including refined or partially refined oleoresin): Provided, That no order issued pursuant to this section shall be effective as to any grapefruit for canning or freezing unless the Secretary of Agriculture determines, in addition to other findings and determinations required by this Act, that the issuance of such order is approved or favored by the processors who, during a representative period determined by the Secretary, have been engaged in canning or freezing such commodity for market and have canned or frozen for market more than 50 per centum of the total volume of such commodity canned or frozen for market during such representative period; and (B) any agricultural commodity (except honey, cotton, rice, wheat, corn, grain sorghums, oats, barley, rye, sugarcane, sugarbeets, wool, mohair, livestock, soybeans, cottonseed, flaxseed, poultry (but not excepting turkeys and not excepting poultry which produce commercial eggs), fruits and vegetables for canning or freezing, including potatoes for canning, freezing, or other processing and apples), or any regional or market classification thereof, not subject to orders under (A) of this paragraph, but not the products (including canned or frozen commodities or products) thereof. No order issued pursuant to this section shall be effective as to cherries, apples, or cranberries for canning or freezing unless the Secretary of Agriculture determines, in addition to other required findings and determinations, that the issuance of such order is approved or favored by processors who, during a representative period determined by the Secretary, have engaged in canning or freezing such commodity for market and have frozen or canned more than 50 per centum of the total volume of the commodity to be regulated which was canned or frozen within the production area, or marketed within the marketing area, defined in such order, during such representative period. No order issued pursuant to this section shall be applicable to peanuts produced in more than one of the following production areas: the Virginia-Carolina production area, the Southeast production area, and the Southwest production area. If the Secretary determines that the declared policy of the title will be better achieved thereby (i) the commodities of the same general class and used wholly or in part for the same purposes may be combined and treated as a single commodity and (ii) the portion of an agricultural commodity devoted to or marketed for a particular use or combination of uses, may be treated as a separate agricultural commodity. All agricultural commodities and products covered hereby shall be deemed specified herein for the purposes of section 8c (6) and (7) of this title.

NOTICE AND HEARING

(3) Whenever the Secretary of Agriculture has reason to believe that the issuance of an order will tend to effectuate the declared policy of this title with respect to any commodity or product thereof specified in subsection (2) of this section, he shall give due notice of and an opportunity for a hearing upon a proposed order.

(4) After such notice and opportunity for hearing, the Secretary of Agriculture shall issue an order if he finds, and sets forth in such order, upon the evidence introduced at such hearing (in addition to such other findings as may be specifically required by this section) that the issuance of such order and all of the terms and conditions thereof will tend to effectuate the declared policy of this title with respect to such commodity.

TERMS—MILK AND ITS PRODUCTS

(5) In the case of milk and its products, orders issued pursuant to this section shall contain one or more of the following terms and conditions, and (except as provided in subsection (7) of this section no others:

(A) Classifying milk in accordance with the form in which or the purpose for which it is used, and fixing, or providing a method for fixing, minimum prices for each such use classification which all handlers shall pay, and the time when payments shall be made, for

Such prices shall be uniform as to all handlers, subject only to adjustments for (1) volume, market, and production differentials customarily applied by the handlers subject to such order, (2) the grade or quality of the milk purchased, and (3) the locations at which delivery of such milk, or any use classification thereof, is made to such handlers. Throughout the 2-year period beginning on the effective date of this sentence (and subsequent to such 2-year period unless modified by amendment to the order involved), for purposes of determining prices for milk of the highest use classification, the Class I skim milk price per hundredweight specified in section 1000.50(b) of title 7, Code of Federal Regulations (or successor regulation), shall be the sum of the adjusted Class I differential specified in section 1000.52 of such title 7, plus the adjustment to Class I prices specified in sections 1005.51(b), 1006.51(b), and 1007.51(b) of such title 7 (or successor regulation), plus the simple average of the advanced pricing factors computed in sections 1000.50(q)(1) and 1000.50(q)(2) of such title 7 (or successor regulation), plus $0.74. 【Throughout the 2-year period beginning on the effective date of this sentence (and subsequent to such 2-year period unless modified by amendment to the order involved), the minimum aggregate amount of the adjustments, under clauses (1) and (2) of the preceding sentence, to prices for milk of the highest use classification under orders that are in effect under this section on the date of the enactment of the Food Security Act of 1985 shall be as follows:】

【Effective at the beginning of such two-year period, the minimum prices for milk of the highest use classification shall be adjusted for the locations at which delivery of such milk is made to such handlers.】

(B) Providing:

(i) for the payment to all producers and associations of producers delivering milk to the same handler of uniform prices for all milk delivered by them: Provided, That, except in the case of orders covering milk products only, such provision is approved or favored by at least three-fourths of the producers who, during a representative period determined by the Secretary of Agriculture, have been engaged in the production for market of milk covered in such order or by producers who, during such representative period, have produced at least three-fourths of the volume of such milk produced for market during such period; the approval required hereunder shall be separate and apart from any other approval or disapproval provided for by this section; or

(ii) for the payment to all producers and associations of producers delivering milk to all handlers of uniform prices for all milk so delivered, irrespective of the uses made of such milk by the individual handler to whom it is delivered;

subject, in either case, only to adjustments for (a) volume, market, and production differentials customarily applied by the handlers subject to such order, (b) the grade or quality of the milk delivered, (c) the locations at which delivery of such milk is made, (d) a further adjustment to encourage seasonal adjustments in the production of milk through equitable apportionment of the total value of the milk purchased by any handler, or by all handlers, among producers on the basis of their marketings of milk during a representative period of time, which need not be limited to one year; (e) a provision providing for the accumulation and disbursement of a fund to encourage seasonal adjustments in the production of milk may be included in an order; and (f) a further adjustment, equitably to apportion the total value of milk purchased by all handlers among producers on the basis of their marketings of milk, which may be adjusted to reflect the utilization of producer milk by all handlers in any use classification or classifications, during a representative period of one to three years, which will be automatically updated each year. In the event a producer holding a base allocated under this clause (f) shall reduce his marketings, such reduction shall not adversely affect his history of production and marketing for the determination of future bases, or future updating of bases, except that an order may provide that, if a producer reduces his marketings below his base allocation in any one or more use classifications designated in the order, the amount of any such reduction shall be taken into account in determining future bases, or future updating of bases. Bases allocated to producers under this clause (f) may be transferable under an order on such terms and conditions, including those which will prevent bases taking on an unreasonable value, as are prescribed in the order by the Secretary of Agriculture. Provisions shall be made in the order for the allocation of bases under this clause (f)—

(i) for the alleviation of hardship and inequity among producers; and

(ii) for providing bases for dairy farmers not delivering milk as producers under the order upon becoming producers under the order who did not produce milk during any part of the representative period and these new producers shall within ninety days after the first regular delivery of milk at the price for the lowest use classification specified in such order be allocated a base which the Secretary determines proper after considering supply and demand conditions, the development of orderly and efficient marketing conditions and to the respective interests of producers under the order, all other dairy farmers and the consuming public. Producer bases so allocated shall for a period of not more than three years be reduced by not more than 20 per centum; and

(iii) dairy farmers not delivering milk as producers under the order upon becoming producers under the order by reason of a plant to which they are making deliveries becoming a pool plant under the order, by amendment or otherwise, shall be provided bases with respect to milk delivered under the order based on their past deliveries of milk on the same basis as other producers under the order; and

(iv) such order may include such additional provisions as the Secretary deems appropriate in regard to the reentry of producers who have previously discontinued their dairy farm enterprise or transferred bases authorized under this clause (f); and

(v) notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, dairy farmers not delivering milk as producers under the order, upon becoming producers under the order, shall within ninety days be provided with respect to milk delivered under the order, allocations based on their past deliveries of milk during the representative period from the production facilities from which they are delivering milk under the order on the same basis as producers under the order on the effective date of order provisions authorized under this clause (f): Provided, That bases shall be allocated only to a producer marketing milk from the production facilities from which he marketed milk during the representative period, except that in no event shall such allocation of base exceed the amount of milk actually delivered under such order.

The assignment of other source milk to various use classes shall be made without regard to whether an order contains provisions authorized under this clause (f). In the case of any producer who during any accounting period delivers a portion of his milk to persons not fully regulated by the order, provision shall be made for reducing the allocation of, or payment to be received by, any such producer under this clause (f) to compensate for any marketings of milk to such other persons for such period or periods as necessary to insure equitable participation in marketings among all producers. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 8c(12) and the last sentence of section 8c(19) of this Act, order provisions under this clause (f) shall not be effective in any marketing order unless separately approved by producers in a referendum in which each individual producer shall have one vote and may be terminated separately whenever the Secretary makes a determination with respect to such provisions as is provided for the termination of an order in subparagraph 8c(16)(B). Disapproval or termination of such order provisions shall not be considered disapproval of the order or of other terms of the order.

(C) In order to accomplish the purposes set forth in paragraphs (A) and (B) of this subsection (5), providing a method for making adjustments in payments, as among handlers (including producers who are also handlers), to the end that the total sums paid by each handler shall equal the value of the milk purchased by him at the prices fixed in accordance with paragraph (A) hereof.

(D) Providing that, in the case of all milk purchased by handlers from any producer who did not regularly sell milk during a period of 30 days next preceding the effective date of such order for consumption in the area covered thereby, payments to such producer, for the period beginning with the first regular delivery by such producer and continuing until the end of two full calendar months following the first day of the next succeeding calendar month, shall be made at the price for the lowest use classification specified in such order, subject to the adjustments specified in paragraph (B) of this subsection (5).

(E) Providing (i) except as to producers for whom such services are being rendered by a cooperative marketing association, qualified as provided in paragraph (F) of this subsection (5), for market information to producers and for the verification of weights, sampling, and testing the milk purchased from producers, and for making appropriate deductions therefor from payments to producers, and (ii) for assurance of, and security for, the payment by handlers for milk purchased.

(F) Nothing contained in this subsection (5) is intended or shall be construed to prevent a cooperative marketing association qualified under the provisions of the Act of Congress of February 18, 1922, as amended, known as the "Capper-Volstead Act", engaged in making collective sales or marketing of milk or its products for the producers thereof, from blending the net proceeds of all of its sales in all markets in all use classifications, and making distribution thereof to its producers in accordance with the contract between the association and its producers: Provided, That it shall not sell milk or its products to any handler for use or consumption in any market at prices less than the prices fixed pursuant to paragraph (A) of this subsection (5) for such milk.

(G) No marketing agreement or order applicable to milk and its products in any marketing area shall prohibit or in any manner limit, in the case of the products of milk, the marketing in that area of any milk or product thereof produced in any production area in the United States.

(H) Omitted; see United States Code for notes.

(I) Establishing or providing for the establishment of research and development projects, and advertising (excluding brand advertising), sales promotion, educational, and other programs, designed to improve or promote the domestic marketing and consumption of milk and its products, to be financed by producers in a manner and at a rate specified in the order, on all producer milk under the order. Producer contributions under this subparagraph may be deducted from funds due producers in computing total pool value or otherwise computing total funds due producers and such deductions shall be in addition to the adjustments authorized by subparagraph (B) of subsection 8c(5). Provision may be made in the order to exempt, or allow suitable adjustments or credits in connection with, milk on which a mandatory checkoff for advertising or marketing research is required under the authority of any State law. Such funds shall be paid to an agency organized by milk producers and producers' cooperative associations in such form and with such methods of operation as shall be specified in the order. Such agency may expend such funds for any of the purposes authorized by this subparagraph and may designate, employ, and allocate funds to persons and organizations engaged in such programs which meet the standards and qualifications specified in the order. All funds collected under this subparagraph shall be separately accounted for and shall be used only for the purposes for which they were collected. Programs authorized by this subparagraph may be either local or national in scope, or both, as provided in the order, but shall not be international. Order provisions under this subparagraph shall not become effective in any marketing order unless such provisions are approved by producers separately from other order provisions, in the same manner provided for the approval of marketing orders, and may be terminated separately whenever the Secretary makes a determination with respect to such provisions as is provided for the termination of an order in subsection 8c(16)(B). Disapproval or termination of such order provisions shall not be considered disapproval of the order or of other terms of the order. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, as amended, any producer against whose marketing any assessment is withheld or collected under the authority of this subparagraph, and who is not in favor of supporting the research and promotion programs, as provided for herein, shall have the right to demand and receive a refund of such assessment pursuant to the terms and conditions specified in the order.

(J) Providing for the payment, from the total sums payable by all handlers for milk (irrespective of the use classification of such milk) and before computing uniform prices under paragraph (A) and making adjustments in payments under paragraph (C), to handlers that are cooperative marketing associations described in paragraph (F) and to handlers with respect to which adjustments in payments are made under paragraph (C), for services of marketwide benefit, including but not limited to—

- (i) providing facilities to furnish additional supplies of milk needed by handlers and to handle and dispose of milk supplies in excess of quantities needed by handlers;
- (ii) handling on specific days quantities of milk that exceed the quantities needed by handlers; and

(iii) transporting milk from one location to another for the purpose of fulfilling requirements for milk of a higher use classification or for providing a market outlet for milk of any use classification.

(K)(i) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, milk produced by dairies—

(I) owned or controlled by foreign persons; and

(II) financed by or with the use of bonds the interest on which is exempt from Federal income tax under section 103 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; shall be treated as other-source milk, and shall be allocated as milk received from producer-handlers for the purposes of classifying producer milk, under the milk marketing program established under this Act. For the purposes of this subparagraph, the term “foreign person” has the meaning given such term under section 9(3) of the Agricultural Foreign Investment Disclosure Act of 1978 (7 U.S.C. 3508(3)).

(ii) The Secretary of Agriculture shall prescribe regulations to carry out this subparagraph.

(iii) This subparagraph shall not apply with respect to any dairy that began operation before May 6, 1986.

(L) Providing that adjustments in payments by handlers under paragraph (A) need not be the same as adjustments to producers under paragraph (B) with regard to adjustments authorized by subparagraphs (2) and (3) of paragraph (A) and clauses (b), (c), and (d) of paragraph (B)(ii).

(M) MINIMUM MILK PRICES FOR HANDLERS.—

(i) APPLICATION OF MINIMUM PRICE REQUIREMENTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, a milk handler described in clause (ii) shall be subject to all of the minimum and uniform price requirements of a Federal milk marketing order issued pursuant to this section applicable to the county in which the plant of the handler is located, at Federal order class prices, if the handler has packaged fluid milk product route dispositions, or sales of packaged fluid milk products to other plants, in a marketing area located in a State that requires handlers to pay minimum prices for raw milk purchases.

(ii) COVERED MILK HANDLERS.—Except as provided in clause (iv), clause (i) applies to a handler of Class I milk products (including a producer-handler or producer operating as a handler) that—

(I) operates a plant that is located within the boundaries of a Federal order milk marketing area (as those boundaries are in effect as of the date of the enactment of this subparagraph);

(II) has packaged fluid milk product route dispositions, or sales of packaged fluid milk products to other plants, in a milk marketing area located in a State that requires handlers to pay minimum prices for raw milk purchases; and

(III) is not otherwise obligated by a Federal milk marketing order, or a regulated milk pricing plan operated by a State, to pay minimum class prices for the raw milk that is used for such dispositions or sales.

(iii) OBLIGATION TO PAY MINIMUM CLASS PRICES.—For purposes of clause (ii)(III), the Secretary may not consider a handler of Class I milk products to be obligated by a Federal milk marketing order to pay minimum class prices for raw milk unless the handler operates the plant as a fully regulated fluid milk distributing plant under a Federal milk marketing order.

(iv) CERTAIN HANDLERS EXEMPTED.—Clause (i) does not apply to—

(I) a handler (otherwise described in clause (ii)) that operates a nonpool plant (as defined in section 1000.8(e) of title 7, Code of Federal Regulations, as in effect on the date of the enactment of this subparagraph);

(II) a producer-handler (otherwise described in clause (ii)) for any month during which the producer-handler has route dispositions, and sales to other plants, of packaged fluid milk products equaling less than 3,000,000 pounds of milk; or

(III) a handler (otherwise described in clause (ii)) for any month during which—

(aa) less than 25 percent of the total quantity of fluid milk products physically received at the plant of the handler (excluding concentrated milk received from another plant by agreement for other than Class I use) is disposed of as route disposition or is transferred in the form of packaged fluid milk products to other plants; or

(bb) less than 25 percent in aggregate of the route disposition or transfers are in a marketing area or areas located in one or more States that require handlers to pay minimum prices for raw milk purchases.

(N) EXEMPTION FOR CERTAIN MILK HANDLERS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, no handler with distribution of Class I milk products in the marketing area described in Order No. 131 shall be exempt during any month from any minimum price requirement established by the Secretary under this subsection if the total distribution of Class I products during the preceding month of any such handler's own farm production exceeds 3,000,000 pounds.

(O) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION REGARDING PRODUCER-HANDLERS.—Subparagraphs (M) and (N) shall not be construed as affecting, expanding, or contracting the treatment of producer-handlers under this subsection except as provided in such subparagraphs.

TERMS—OTHER COMMODITIES

(6) In the case of the agricultural commodities and the products thereof, other than milk and its products, specified in subsection (2) orders issued pursuant to this section shall contain one or more of the following terms and conditions, and (except as provided in subsection (7)), no others:

(11) (A) No order shall be issued under this section which is applicable to all production areas or marketing areas, or both, of any commodity or product thereof unless the Secretary finds that the issuance of several orders applicable to the respective regional production areas or regional marketing areas, or both, as the case may be, of the commodity or product would not effectively carry out the declared policy of this title.

(B) Except in the case of milk and its products, orders issued under this section shall be limited in their application to the smallest regional production areas or regional marketing areas, or both, as the case may be, which the Secretary finds practicable, consistently with carrying out such declared policy.

(C) All orders issued under this section which are applicable to the same commodity or product thereof shall, so far as practicable, prescribe such different terms, applicable to different production areas and marketing areas, as the Secretary finds necessary to give due recognition to the differences in production and marketing of such commodity or product in such areas.

producers with respect to the issuance of any order, or any term or condition thereof, or the termination thereof, the Secretary shall consider the approval or disapproval by any cooperative association of producers, bona fide engaged in marketing the commodity or product thereof covered by such order, or in rendering services for or advancing the interests of the producers of such commodity, as the approval or disapproval of the producers who are members of, stockholders in, or under contract with, such cooperative association of producers.

RETAILER AND PRODUCER EXEMPTION

(13) (A) No order issued under subsection (9) of this section shall be applicable to any person who sells agricultural commodities or products thereof at retail in his capacity as such retailer, except to a retailer in his capacity as a retailer of milk and its products.

(B) No order issued under this title shall be applicable to any producer in his capacity as a producer.

VIOLATION OF ORDER

(14) Any handler subject to an order issued under this section, or any officer, director, agent, or employee of such handler, who violates any provision of such order (other than a provision calling for payment of a pro rata share of expenses) shall, on conviction, be fined not less than $50 or more than $5,000 for each such violation, and each day during which such violation continues shall be deemed a separate violation: Provided, That if the court finds that a petition pursuant to subsection (15) of this section was filed and prosecuted by the defendant in good faith and not for delay, no penalty shall be imposed under this subsection for such violations as occurred between the date upon which the defendant's petition was filed with the Secretary, and the date upon which notice of the Secretary's ruling thereon was given to the defendant in accordance with regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (15).

PETITION BY HANDLER AND REVIEW

(15) (A) Any handler subject to an order may file a written petition with the Secretary of Agriculture, stating that any such order or any provision of any such order or any obligation imposed in connection therewith is not in accordance with law and praying for a modification thereof or to be exempted therefrom. After such hearing, the Secretary shall make a ruling upon the prayer of such petition which shall be final, if in accordance with law.

(B) The District Courts of the United States (including the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia) in any district in which such handler is an inhabitant, or has his principal place of business, are hereby vested with jurisdiction in equity to review such ruling, provided a bill in equity for that purpose is filed within twenty days from the date of the entry of such ruling. Service of process in such proceedings may be had upon the Secretary by delivery to him a copy of the bill of complaint. If the court determines that such ruling is not in accordance with law, it shall remand such proceedings to the Secretary with directions either (1) to make such ruling as the court shall determine to be in accordance with law, or (2) to take such further proceedings as, in its opinion, the law requires. The pendency of proceedings instituted pursuant to this subsection (15) shall not impede, hinder, or delay the United States or the Secretary of Agriculture from obtaining relief pursuant to section 8a (6) of this title. Any proceedings brought pursuant to section 8a (6) of this title (except where brought by way of counterclaim in proceedings instituted pursuant to this subsection (15)) shall abate whenever a final decree has been rendered in proceedings between the same parties, and covering the same subject matter, instituted pursuant to this subsection (15).

TERMINATION OF ORDERS AND MARKETING AGREEMENTS

(16) (A)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), the Secretary of Agriculture shall, whenever he finds that any order issued under this section, or any provision thereof, obstructs or does not tend to effectuate the declared policy of this title, terminate or suspend the operation of such order or such provision thereof.

(ii) The Secretary may not terminate any order issued under this section for a commodity for which there is no Federal program established to support the price of such commodity unless the Secretary gives notice of, and a statement of the reasons relied upon by the Secretary for, the proposed termination of such order to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate and the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives not later than 60 days before the date such order will be terminated.

(B) The Secretary shall terminate any marketing agreement entered into under section 8b, or order issued under this section, at the end of the then current marketing period for such commodity, specified in such marketing agreement or order, whenever he finds that such termination is favored by a majority of the producers who, during a representative period determined by the Secretary, have been engaged in the production for market of the commodity specified in such marketing agreement or order, within the production area specified in such marketing agreement or order, or who, during such representative period, have been engaged in the production of such commodity for sale within the marketing area specified in such marketing agreement or order: Provided, That such majority have, during such representative period, produced for market more than 50 per centum of the volume of such commodity produced for market within the production area specified in such marketing agreement or order, or have, during such representative period, produced more than 50 per centum of the volume of such commodity sold in the marketing area specified in such marketing agreement or order, but such termination shall be effective only if announced on or before such date (prior to the end of the then current marketing period) as may be specified in such marketing agreement or order.

(C) Except as otherwise provided in this subsection with respect to the termination of an order issued under this section, the termination or suspension of any order or amendment thereto or provision thereof, shall not be considered an order within the meaning of this section.

(17) PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO AMENDMENTS.—

(A) APPLICABILITY TO AMENDMENTS.—The provisions of this section and section 8d applicable to orders shall be applicable to amendments to orders.

(B) SUPPLEMENTAL RULES OF PRACTICE.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this subparagraph, the Secretary shall issue, using informal rulemaking, supplemental rules of practice to define guidelines and timeframes for the rulemaking process relating to amendments to orders.

(ii) ISSUES.—At a minimum, the supplemental rules of practice shall establish—

(I) proposal submission requirements;

(II) pre-hearing information session specifications;

(III) written testimony and data request requirements;

(IV) public participation timeframes; and

(V) electronic document submission standards.

(iii) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The supplemental rules of practice shall take effect not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this subparagraph, as determined by the Secretary.

(C) HEARING TIMEFRAMES.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Not more than 30 days after the receipt of a proposal for an amendment hearing regarding a milk marketing order, the Secretary shall—

(I) issue a notice providing an action plan and expected timeframes for completion of the hearing not more than 120 days after the date of the issuance of the notice;

(II)(aa) issue a request for additional information to be used by the Secretary in making a determination regarding the proposal; and

(bb) if the additional information is not provided to the Secretary within the timeframe requested by the Secretary, issue a denial of the request; or

(III) issue a denial of the request.

(ii) REQUIREMENT.—A post-hearing brief may be filed under this paragraph not later than 60 days after the date of an amendment hearing regarding a milk marketing order.

(iii) RECOMMENDED DECISIONS.—A recommended decision on a proposed amendment to an order shall be issued not later than 90 days after the deadline for the submission of post-hearing briefs.

(iv) FINAL DECISIONS.—A final decision on a proposed amendment to an order shall be issued not later than 60 days after the deadline for submission of comments and exceptions to the recommended decision issued under clause (iii).

(D) INDUSTRY ASSESSMENTS.—If the Secretary determines it is necessary to improve or expedite rulemaking under this subsection, the Secretary may impose an as-assessment on the affected industry to supplement appropriated funds for the procurement of service providers, such as court reporters.

(E) USE OF INFORMAL RULEMAKING.—The Secretary may use rulemaking under section 553 of title 5, United States Code, to amend orders, other than provisions of orders that directly affect milk prices.

(F) AVOIDING DUPLICATION.—The Secretary shall not be required to hold a hearing on any amendment proposed to be made to a milk marketing order in response to an application for a hearing on the proposed amendment if—

(i) the application requesting the hearing is received by the Secretary not later than 90 days after the date on which the Secretary has announced the decision on a previously proposed amendment to that order; and

(ii) the 2 proposed amendments are essentially the same, as determined by the Secretary.

(G) MONTHLY FEED AND FUEL COSTS FOR MAKE ALLOWANCES.—As part of any hearing to adjust make allowances under marketing orders commencing prior to September 30, 2012, the Secretary shall—

(i) determine the average monthly prices of feed and fuel incurred by dairy producers in the relevant marketing area;

(ii) consider the most recent monthly feed and fuel price data available; and

(iii) consider those prices in determining whether or not to adjust make allowances.

MILK PRICES

(18) The Secretary of Agriculture, prior to prescribing any term in any marketing agreement or order, or amendment thereto, relating to milk or its products, if such term is to fix minimum prices to be paid to producers or associations of producers, or prior to modifying the price fixed in any such term, shall ascertain the parity prices of such commodities. The prices which it is declared to be the policy of Congress to establish in section 2 of this title shall, for the purposes of such agreement, order, or amendment, be adjusted to reflect the price of feeds, the available supplies of feeds, and other economic conditions which affect market supply and demand for milk or its products in the marketing area to which the contemplated marketing agreement, order, or amendment relates. Whenever the Secretary finds, upon the basis of the evidence adduced at the hearing required by section 8b or 8c, as the case may be, that the parity prices of such commodities are not reasonable in view of the price of feeds, the available supplies of feeds, and other economic conditions which affect market supply and demand for milk and its products in the marketing area to which the contemplated agreement, order, or amendment relates, he shall fix such prices as he finds will reflect such factors, insure a sufficient quantity of pure and wholesome milk, and be in the public interest. Thereafter, as the Secretary finds necessary on account of changed circumstances, he shall, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, make adjustments in such prices.

PRODUCER REFERENDUM

(19) For the purpose of ascertaining whether the issuance of an order is approved or favored by producers or processors, as required under the applicable provisions of this title, the Secretary may conduct a referendum among producers or processors and in the case of an order other than an amendatory order shall do so. The requirements of approval or favor under any such provision shall be held to be complied with if, of the total number of producers or processors, or the total volume of production, as the case may be, represented in such referendum, the percentage approving or favoring is equal to or in excess of the percentage required under such provision. The terms and conditions of the proposed order shall be described by the Secretary in the ballot used in the conduct of the referendum. The nature, content, or extent of such description shall not be a basis for attacking the legality of the order or any action relating thereto. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as limiting representation by cooperative associations as provided in subsection (12) of this section. For the purpose of ascertaining whether the issuance of an order applicable to pears for canning or freezing is approved or favored by producers as required under the applicable provisions of this title, the Secretary shall conduct a referendum among producers in each State in which pears for canning or freezing are proposed to be included within the provisions of such marketing order and the requirements of approval or favor under any such provisions applicable to pears for canning or freezing shall be held to be complied with if, of the total number of producers, or the total volume of production, as the case may be, represented in such referendum, the percentage approving or favoring is equal to or in excess of 66 $\frac{2}{3}$ per centum except that in the event that pear producers in any State fail to approve or favor the issuance of any such marketing order, it shall not be made effective in such State.

SEC. 8e. (a) Subject to the provisions of subsections (c) and (d) and notwithstanding any other provision of law, whenever a marketing order issued by the Secretary of Agriculture pursuant to section 8c of this Act contains any terms or conditions regulating the grade, size, quality, or maturity of tomatoes, raisins, olives (other than Spanish-style green olives), prunes, avocados, mangoes, limes, grapefruit, green peppers, Irish potatoes, cucumbers, oranges, onions, walnuts, pecans, dates, filberts, table grapes, eggplants, kiwifruit, nectarines, clementines, plums, pistachios, apples, or caneberries (including raspberries, blackberries, and loganberries) produced in the United States the importation into the United States of any such commodity, other than dates for processing, during the period of time such order is in effect shall be prohibited unless it complies with the grade, size, quality, and maturity provisions of such order or comparable restrictions promulgated hereunder: Provided, That this prohibition shall not apply to such commodities when shipped into continental United States from the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or any Territory or possession of the United States where this Act has force and effect: Provided further, That whenever two or more such marketing orders regulating the same agricultural commodity produced in different areas of the United States are concurrently in effect, the importation into the United States of any such commodity, other than dates for processing, shall be prohibited unless it complies with the grade, size, quality, and maturity provisions of the order which, as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture, regulates the commodity produced in the area with which the imported commodity is in most direct competition. Such prohibition shall not become effective until after the giving of such notice as the Secretary of Agriculture determines reasonable, which shall not be less than three days. In determining the amount of notice that is reasonable in the case of tomatoes the Secretary of Agriculture shall give due consideration to the time required for their transportation and entry into the United States after picking. Whenever the Secretary of Agriculture finds that the application of the restrictions under a marketing order to an imported commodity is not practicable because of variations in characteristics between the domestic and imported commodity he shall establish with respect to the imported commodity, other than dates for processing, such grade, size, quality, and maturity restrictions by varieties, types, or other classifications as he finds will be equivalent or comparable to those imposed upon the domestic commodity under such order. The Secretary of Agriculture may promulgate such rules and regulations as he deems necessary, to carry out the provisions of this section. Any person who violates any provision of this section or of any rule, regulation, or order promulgated hereunder shall be subject to a forfeiture in the amount prescribed in section 8a(5) or, upon conviction, a penalty in the amount prescribed in section 8c(14) of the Act, or to both such forfeiture and penalty.

(b)(1) The Secretary may provide for a period of time (not to exceed 35 days) in addition to the period of time covered by a marketing order during which the marketing order requirements would be in effect for a particular commodity during any year if the Secretary determines that such additional period of time is necessary—

(A) to effectuate the purposes of this Act; and

(B) to prevent the circumvention of the grade, size, quality, or maturity standards of a seasonal marketing order applicable to a commodity produced in the United States by imports of such commodity.

(2) In making the determination required by paragraph (1), the Secretary, through notice and comment procedures, shall consider—

(A) to what extent, during the previous year, imports of a commodity that did not meet the requirements of a marketing order applicable to such commodity were marketed in the United States during the period that such marketing order requirements were in effect for available domestic commodities (or would have been marketed during such time if not for any additional period established by the Secretary);

(B) if the importation into the United States of such commodity did, or was likely to, circumvent the grade, size, quality or maturity standards of a seasonal marketing order applicable to such commodity produced in the United States; and

- (C) the availability and price of commodities of the variety covered by the marketing order during any additional period the marketing order requirements are to be in effect.
- (3) An additional period established by the Secretary in accordance with this subsection shall be—
- (A) announced not later than 30 days before the date such additional period is to be in effect; and
- (B) reviewed by the Secretary on request, through notice and comment procedures, at least every 3 years in order to determine if the additional period is still needed to prevent circumvention of the seasonal marketing order by imported commodities.
- (4) For the purposes of carrying out this subsection, the Secretary is authorized to make such reasonable inspections as may be necessary.
- (c) Prior to any important prohibition or regulation under this section being made effective with respect to any commodity—
- (1) the Secretary of Agriculture shall notify the United States Trade Representative of such import prohibition or regulation; and
- (2) the United States Trade Representative shall advise the Secretary of Agriculture, within 60 days of the notification under paragraph (1), to ensure that the application of the grade, size, quality, and maturity provisions of the relevant marketing order, or comparable restrictions, to imports is not inconsistent with United States international obligations under any trade agreement, including the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.
- (d) The Secretary may proceed with the proposed prohibition or regulation if the Secretary receives the advice and concurrence of the United States Trade Representative within 60 days of the notification under subsection (c)(1).

(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in section 1222 and notwithstanding any other provision of law, any person who in any crop year beginning after November 28, 1990, converts a wetland by draining, dredging, filling, leveling, or any other means for the purpose, or to have the effect, of making the production of an agricultural commodity possible on such converted wetland shall be ineligible for those payments, loans, or programs specified in subsection (b) for that crop year and all subsequent crop years.

(B) DUTY OF THE SECRETARY.—Before determining that a person is ineligible for program benefits under this subsection, the Secretary shall determine that no exemption under section 1222 applies.

(e) PRIOR LOANS.—This section shall not apply to a loan described in subsection (b) made before December 23, 1985.

(f) WETLAND.—The Secretary shall have, and shall not delegate to any private person or entity, authority to determine whether a person has complied with this subtitle.

SEC. 1222. DELINEATION OF WETLANDS; EXEMPTIONS.

(a) DELINEATION BY THE SECRETARY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b) and paragraph (6), the Secretary shall delineate, determine, and certify all wetlands located on subject land on a farm.

(2) WETLAND DELINEATION MAPS.—The Secretary shall delineate wetlands on wetland delineation maps. On the request of a person, the Secretary shall make a reasonable effort to make an on-site wetland determination prior to delineation.

(3) CERTIFICATION.—On providing notice to affected persons, the Secretary shall—

(A) certify whether a map is sufficient for the purpose of making a determination of ineligibility for program benefits under section 1221; and

(B) provide an opportunity to appeal the certification prior to the certification becoming final.

(4) DURATION OF CERTIFICATION.—A final certification made under paragraph (3) shall remain valid and in effect as long as the area is devoted to an agricultural use or until such time as the person affected by the certification requests review of the certification by the Secretary.

(5) REVIEW OF MAPPING ON APPEAL.—In the case of an appeal of the Secretary's certification, the Secretary shall review and certify the accuracy of the mapping of all land subject to the appeal to ensure that the subject land has been accurately delineated. Prior to rendering a decision on the appeal, the Secretary shall conduct an on-site inspection of the subject land on a farm.

(6) RELIANCE ON PRIOR CERTIFIED DELINEATION.—No person shall be adversely affected because of having taken an action based on a previous certified wetland delineation by the Secretary. The delineation shall not be subject to a subsequent wetland certification or delineation by the Secretary, unless requested by the person under paragraph (4).

(b) EXEMPTIONS.—No person shall become ineligible under section 1221 for program loans or payments under the following circumstances:

(1) As the result of the production of an agricultural commodity on the following lands:

(A) A converted wetland if the conversion of the wetland was commenced before December 23, 1985.

(B) Land that is a nontidal drainage or irrigation ditch excavated in upland.

(C) A wet area created by a water delivery system, irrigation, irrigation system, or application of water for irrigation.

(D) A wetland on which the owner or operator of a farm or ranch uses normal cropping or ranching practices to produce an agricultural commodity in a manner that is consistent for the area where the production is possible as a result of a natural condition, such as drought, and is without action by the producer that destroys a natural wetland characteristic.

(E) Land that is an artificial lake or pond created by excavating or diking land (that is not a wetland) to collect and retain water and that is used primarily for livestock watering, fish production, irrigation, wildlife, fire control, flood control, cranberry growing, or rice production, or as a settling pond.

(F) A wetland that is temporarily or incidentally created as a result of adjacent development activity.

(G) A converted wetland if the original conversion of the wetland was commenced before December 23, 1985, and the Secretary determines the wetland characteristics returned after that date as a result of—

(i) the lack of maintenance of drainage, dikes, levees, or similar structures;

(ii) a lack of management of the lands containing the wetland; or

(iii) circumstances beyond the control of the person.

(H) A converted wetland, if—

(i) the converted wetland was determined by the Natural Resources Conservation Service to have been manipulated for the production of an agricultural commodity or forage prior to December 23, 1985, and was returned to wetland conditions through a voluntary restoration, enhancement, or creation action subsequent to that determination;

(ii) technical determinations regarding the prior site conditions and the restoration, enhancement, or creation action have been adequately documented by the Natural Resources Conservation Service;

(iii) the proposed conversion action is approved by the Natural Resources Conservation Service prior to implementation; and

(iv) the extent of the proposed conversion is limited so that the conditions will be at least equivalent to the wetland functions and values that existed prior to implementation of the voluntary wetland restoration, enhancement, or creation action.

(2) For the conversion of the following:

(A) An artificial lake or pond created by excavating or diking land that is not a wetland to collect and retain water and that is used primarily for livestock watering, fish production, irrigation, wildlife, fire control, flood control, cranberry growing, rice production, or as a settling pond.

(B) A wetland that is temporarily or incidentally created as a result of adjacent development activity.

(C) A wetland on which the owner or operator of a farm or ranch uses normal cropping or ranching practices to produce an agricultural commodity in a manner that is consistent for the area where the production is possible as a result of a natural condition, such as drought, and is without action by the producer that destroys a natural wetland characteristic.

(D) A wetland previously identified as a converted wetland (if the original conversion of the wetland was commenced before December 23, 1985), but that the Secretary determines returned to wetland status after that date as a result of—

(i) the lack of maintenance of drainage, dikes, levees, or similar structures;

(ii) a lack of management of the lands containing the wetland; or

(iii) circumstances beyond the control of the person.

(E) A wetland, if—

(i) the wetland was determined by the Natural Resources Conservation Service to have been manipulated for the production of an agricultural commodity or forage prior to December 23, 1985, and was returned to wetland conditions through a voluntary restoration, enhancement, or creation action subsequent to that determination;

(ii) technical determinations regarding the prior site conditions and the restoration, enhancement, or creation action have been adequately documented by the Natural Resources Conservation Service;

(iii) the proposed conversion action is approved by the Natural Resources Conservation Service prior to implementation; and

(iv) the extent of the proposed conversion is limited so that the conditions will be at least equivalent to the wetland functions and values that existed prior to implementation of the voluntary wetland restoration, enhancement, or creation action.

(c) ON-SITE INSPECTION REQUIREMENT.—No program loans, payments, or benefits shall be withheld from a person under this subtitle unless the Secretary has conducted an on-site visit of the subject land.

(d) IDENTIFICATION OF MINIMAL EFFECT EXEMPTIONS.—For purposes of applying the minimal effect exemption under subsection (f)(1), not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of the Agriculture and Nutrition Act of 2018, the Secretary shall identify by regulation categorical minimal effect exemptions on a regional basis to assist persons in avoiding a violation of the ineligibility provisions of section 1221. The Secretary shall ensure that employees of the Department of Agriculture who administer this subtitle receive appropriate training to properly apply the minimal effect exemptions determined by the Secretary.

(e) NONWETLANDS.—The Secretary shall exempt from the ineligibility provisions of section 1221 any action by a person upon lands in any case in which the Secretary determines that any one of the following does not apply with respect to such lands:

(1) Such lands have a predominance of hydric soils.

(2) Such lands are inundated or saturated by surface or groundwater at a frequency and duration sufficient to support a prevalence of hydrophytic vegetation typically adapted for life in saturated soil conditions.

(3) Such lands, under normal circumstances, support a prevalence of such vegetation.

(f) MINIMAL EFFECT; MITIGATION.—The Secretary shall exempt a person from the ineligibility provisions of section 1221 for any action associated with the production of an agricultural commodity on a converted wetland, or the conversion of a wetland, if 1 or more of the following conditions apply, as determined by the Secretary:

(1) The action, individually and in connection with all other similar actions authorized by the Secretary in the area, will have a minimal effect on the functional hydrological and biological value of the wetlands in the area, including the value to waterfowl and wildlife.

(2) The wetland and the wetland values, acreage, and functions are mitigated by the person through the restoration of a converted wetland, the enhancement of an existing wetland, or the creation of a new wetland, and the restoration, enhancement, or creation is—

(A) in accordance with a wetland conservation plan;

(B) in advance of, or concurrent with, the action;

(C) not at the expense of the Federal Government;

(D) in the case of enhancement or restoration of wetlands, on not greater than a 1-for-1 acreage basis unless more acreage is needed to provide equivalent functions and values that will be lost as a result of the wetland conversion to be mitigated;

(E) in the case of creation of wetlands, on greater than a 1-for-1 acreage basis if more acreage is needed to provide equivalent functions and values that will be lost as a result of the wetland conversion that is mitigated;

(F) on lands in the same general area of the local watershed as the converted wetland; and

(G) with respect to the restored, enhanced, or created wetland, made subject to an easement that—

(i) is recorded on public land records;

(ii) remains in force for as long as the converted wetland for which the restoration, enhancement, or creation to be mitigated remains in agricultural use or is not returned to its original wetland classification with equivalent functions and values; and

(iii) prohibits making alterations to the restored, enhanced, or created wetland that lower the wetland's functions and values.

(3) The wetland was converted after December 23, 1985, but before November 28, 1990, and the wetland values, acreage, and functions are mitigated by the producer through the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), (D), (F), and (G) of paragraph (2).

(4) The action was authorized by a permit issued under section 404 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1344) and the wetland values, acreage, and functions of the converted wetland were adequately mitigated for the purposes of this subtitle.

(g) MITIGATION APPEALS.—A person shall be afforded the right to appeal, under section 1243, the imposition of a mitigation agreement requiring greater than one-to-one acreage mitigation to which the person is subject.

(h) GOOD FAITH EXEMPTION.—

(1) EXEMPTION DESCRIBED.—The Secretary may waive a person's ineligibility under section 1221 for program loans, payments, and benefits as the result of the conversion of a wetland subsequent to November 28, 1990, or the production of an agricultural commodity on a converted wetland, if the Secretary determines that the person has acted in good faith and without intent to violate this subtitle.

(2) ELIGIBLE REVIEWERS.—A determination of the Secretary, or a designee of the Secretary, under paragraph (1) shall be reviewed by the applicable—

(A) State Executive Director, with the technical concurrence of the State Conservationist; or

(B) district director, with the technical concurrence of the area conservationist.

(3) PERIOD FOR COMPLIANCE.—The Secretary shall provide a person who the Secretary determines has acted in good faith and without intent to violate this subtitle with a reasonable period, but not to exceed 1 year, during which to implement the measures and practices necessary to be considered to be actively restoring the subject wetland.

(i) RESTORATION.—Any person who is determined to be ineligible for program benefits under section 1221 for any crop year shall not be ineligible for such program benefits under such section for any subsequent crop year if, prior to the beginning of such subsequent crop year, the person has fully restored the characteristics of the converted wetland to its prior wetland state or has otherwise mitigated for the loss of wetland values, as determined by the Secretary, through the restoration, enhancement, or creation of wetland values in the same general area of the local watershed as the converted wetland.

(j) DETERMINATIONS; RESTORATION AND MITIGATION PLANS; MONITORING ACTIVITIES.—Technical determinations, the development of restoration and mitigation plans, and monitoring activities under this section shall be made by the [National Resources Conservation Service] Natural Resources Conservation Service.

(k) MITIGATION BANKING.—

(2) APPLICABILITY.—Subsection (f)(2)(C) shall not apply to this subsection.

(3) POLICY AND CRITERIA.—The Secretary shall develop the appropriate policy and criteria that will allow willing persons to access existing mitigation banks, under this section or any other authority, that will serve the purposes of this section without requiring the Secretary to hold an easement, in whole or in part, in a mitigation bank.

Subchapter B—Conservation Reserve

SEC. 1231. CONSERVATION RESERVE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Through the [2018] 2023 fiscal year, the Secretary shall formulate and carry out a conservation reserve program under which land is enrolled through the use of contracts to assist owners and operators of land specified in subsection (b) to conserve and improve the soil, water, and wildlife resources of such land and to address issues raised by State, regional, and national conservation initiatives.

(b) ELIGIBLE LAND.—The Secretary may include in the program established under this subchapter—

(1) highly erodible cropland that—

(A)(i) if permitted to remain untreated could substantially reduce the agricultural production capability for future generations; or

(ii) cannot be farmed in accordance with a plan that complies with the requirements of subtitle B; and

(B) the Secretary determines had a cropping history or was considered to be planted for 4 of the 6 years preceding the date of enactment of the Agricultural Act of 2014 (except for land enrolled in the conservation reserve program as of that date);

(A) contain forbs or shrubland (including improved rangeland and pastureland) for which grazing is the predominant use;

(B) are located in an area historically dominated by grasslands; and

(C) could provide habitat for animal and plant populations of significant ecological value if the land is retained in its current use or restored to a natural condition;

(4) cropland that is otherwise ineligible if the Secretary determines that—

(A) if permitted to remain in agricultural production, the land would—

(i) contribute to the degradation of soil, water, or air quality; or

(ii) pose an on-site or off-site environmental threat to soil, water, or air quality;

(B) the land is a—

(i) newly-created, permanent grass sod waterway; or

(ii) a contour grass sod strip established and maintained as part of an approved conservation plan;

(C) the land will be devoted to newly established living snow fences, permanent wildlife habitat, windbreaks, shelterbelts, or filterstrips or riparian buffers devoted to trees, shrubs, or grasses;

- (D) the land poses an off-farm environmental threat, or a threat of continued degradation of productivity due to soil salinity, if permitted to remain in production; or
- (E) enrollment of the land would facilitate a net savings in groundwater or surface water resources of the agricultural operation of the producer; or
- (5) the portion of land in a field not enrolled in the conservation reserve in a case in which—
- (A) more than 50 percent of the land in the field is enrolled as a buffer or filterstrip, or more than 75 percent of the land in the field is enrolled as a conservation practice other than as a buffer or filterstrip; and
- (B) the remainder of the field is—
- (i) infeasible to farm; and
- (ii) enrolled at regular rental rates.
- (c) PLANTING STATUS OF CERTAIN LAND.—For purposes of determining the eligibility of land to be placed in the conservation reserve established under this subchapter, land shall be considered to be planted to an agricultural commodity during a crop year if, during the crop year, the land was devoted to a conserving use.

[(c) ENTERING INTO CONTRACTS.—After a determination that a producer is eligible for the program under subsection (a), and a determination that the contract offer ranks sufficiently high under the evaluation criteria under subsection (b), the Secretary shall enter into a conservation stewardship contract with the producer to enroll the eligible land to be covered by the contract.

The total costs of rehabilitation include the costs associated with all components of the rehabilitation project, including acquisition of land, easements, and rights-of-ways, rehabilitation project administration, the provision of technical assistance, contracting, and construction costs, except that the local organization shall be responsible for securing all land, easements, or rights-of-ways necessary for the project.

(2) AMOUNT OF ASSISTANCE; LIMITATIONS.—The amount of Federal funds that may be made available under this subsection to a local organization for construction of a particular rehabilitation project shall be equal to 65 percent of the total rehabilitation costs, but not to exceed 100 percent of actual construction costs incurred in the rehabilitation. (3) RELATION TO LAND USE AND DEVELOPMENT REGULATIONS.—As a condition on entering into an agreement to provide financial assistance under this subsection, the Secretary, working in concert with the affected unit or units of general purpose local government, may require that proper zoning or other developmental regulations are in place in the watershed in which the structural measures to be rehabilitated under the agreement are located so that—

(A) the completed rehabilitation project is not quickly rendered inadequate by additional development; and

(f) RANKING OF REQUESTS FOR REHABILITATION ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary shall establish such system of approving rehabilitation requests, recognizing that such requests will be received throughout the fiscal year and subject to the availability of funds to carry out this section, as is necessary for proper administration by the Department of Agriculture and equitable for all local organizations. The approval process shall be in writing, and made known to all local organizations and appropriate State agencies.

(g) PROHIBITION ON CERTAIN REHABILITATION ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary may not approve a rehabilitation request if the need for rehabilitation of the structure is the result of a lack of adequate maintenance by the party responsible for the maintenance.

(h) FUNDING.—
